Irwin Came Here After He Killed 3 In New York

Gedeon Killer 'Bummed' Way Out After Photo Was Printed.

'Flies From Chicago With N.Y. Detective

Sculptor Jokes in Line-up After Surrender to Newspaper.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, June 27.—Robert Irwin, 29-year-old sculptor, was arrested here today by New York police officers who said he admitted the triple "Gedeon slayings" in New York last Easter Sunday.

Irwin appeared at the office of Sheriff John Toman about noon after surrendering last night at the office of the Herald and Examiner.

He had been the object of a Nation-wide search since the bodies of pretty Veronica (Ronnie) Gedeon, 20; her mother and Frank Byrnes, a roomer, were found in the Gedeons' New York apartment Easter morning.

Irwin had been in love with "Ronnie's" older sister, Mrs. Ethel Kudner, and New York police said he had a fixation that Mrs. Gedeon turned Ethel away from his attentions.

Irwin, confessing the crime, revealed he had gone to Washington after the murders, became frightened when he saw his picture on the front page of a newspaper, and left town hurriedly on a freight train.

Shortly after Irwin was placed in custody, Lieut. Martin S. Owens, of the New York police homicide squad, '

The plane bearing Irwin back to the scene of the triple slaying arrived in New York late tonight. New York police officials began questioning the suspect immediately.

Slayer Is Nonchalant.

Lieut. Owens informed his superiors he obtained custody of Irwin at the sheriff's office "from the newspaper people."

Wearing a white linen suit, two-toned shoes, Panama hat and blue tie, Irwin was taken from the sheriff's office to the Police Bureau of Identification for fingerprinting and photographing.

He assumed a confident air while surrounded by police officers, refused to pose for photographers and laughed at attempts to snap him. He smoked cigarettes incessantly.

When a newsman asked him if he expected the electric chair as punishment for the slayings, Irwin nonchalantly said:

"I'm not concerned about that. I'm not worried about anything."

He stepped on a scale which he tipped at 158 pounds and remarked: "That's fine. That's more than I've weighed in a long time."

Lieut. Owens halted further attempts to question him by requesting reporters to leave the room.

Sheriff Toman said he received the first word of Irwin's surrender in a long-distance telephone call at his new Buffalo (Mich.) summer home.

"A man who would not identify himself said that if I would be at my office at 1:30, Irwin would be turned over to me. I arrived at my office just in time to see several men bringing Irwin in."

Identified in Cleveland.

Search for Irwin turned to Chicago and the Middle West generally yesterday after Cleveland, Ohio, police said a man who fled his job as barboy in a hotel there had been identified as the fugitive.

A kitchen girl in the Cleveland hotel, Henrietta Koscianski, 19, told police there she recognized the barboy, known to her as "Robert Murray," from pictures in a detective story magazine and that when she asked "Murray" if he had ever heard of Irwin he said "No," but left abruptly and did not return.

Radio warnings were flashed yesterday to police throughout the Midwest when Cleveland authorities established that a man answering Irwin's description was believed to have boarded a Chicago-bound bus at Cleveland.

For several hours there was no further trace of the fugitive. Then late last night the news of his surrender here was flashed.

John Dienhart, the newspaper's managing editor, said in declining to tell how Irwin happened to give

Soviet "Flying Heroes" Greeted Here

Russian Fliers Arrive in D. C.; Hear Plaudits

Interview Forbidden, But Heroes Chat With U. S. Airmen.

Three Soviet fliers who thrilled the world with a nonstop flight over the North Pole from Moscow to Vancouver came to Washington yesterday for a round of official congratulations and, perhaps, a handshake from President Roosevelt.

The full staff of the Soviet Embassy and dozens of Russians were on hand at Union Station early yesterday morning when the fliers—none of whom speak English—arrived with their ambassador, Alexander Troyanovsky.

They were hurried off to the embassy to spend most of the day resting.

Late in the afternoon they were taken to the Army's airport at Bolling Field for a reception given in their honor by Brig. Gen. Oscar Westover, chief of the Air Corps.

Ambassador Troyanokvsky's engagement to present the fliers—Valeri Chekaloff, Georgi Baibukoff and Alexander Beliakoff—to President Roosevelt at the White House today was tentative.

A visit with Secretary of State Cordell Hull and a luncheon at the Mayflower are on their schedule for today.

Ambassador Troyanovsky made it clear as the fliers reached the Officers' Club at Bolling Field for their reception yesterday afternoon that the guests of honor "would have nothing to say."

But if the Russians thus escaped an interview with the press, they were not spared responding to questions which U. S. Army air men, flocking about them, asked about the flight. And the heroes in turn put a few questions themselves.

"How far do your American planes fly?" Beliakoff asked one of the guests with the aid of an interpreter.

"About 500 miles," was the answer.

Beliakoff smiled broadly.

The aviators were asked many questions about their flight. Did they fly by instuments?—yes. Did they use a clock compass?—no an improved instrument. How high did they fly by instrument?—yes. Did feet.

In the reception line with the fliers were Ambassador and Mrs. Troyanovsky, Gen. and Mrs. Westover, and several other officers of the Air Corps.

Today's program for the trio will begin with a courtesy call on Secretary of State Cordell Hull at the State Department just before noon.

Then, according to tentative plans they'll go to the White House to be received by the President. Ambassador Troyanovsky will present them.

Boy Scout Vanguard of 11,000 Pitching Tents for Jamboree

Dr. James E. West, Chief Executive, Flies to City; Special Trains and Buses Bringing Youngsters From All Over World.

More than 11,000 Boy Scouts were on the scene of their first national Jamboree here last night.

Ranks of the early arrivals were more than doubled during the day as nearly two score of special trains and many more buses brought khaki-uniformed youths from every section of the country.

Last night as they gathered by mess tents through the Jamboree grounds they set up a noisy chatter of tales about their getting here, of tent-pitching experiences, of plans for the busy ten-day period they will all spend in the Capital.

Their chief, Dr James E. West, was among the Sunday arrivals.

The chief Scout executive arrived from New York by airplane and took charge of last-minute preparations for the greatest show the Boy Scouts of America have ever staged.

From his headquarters, set up yesterday just west of the Washington Monument, Dr. West saw the camping grounds for his 25,000 young men spring alive with activity.

Tents were springing up like mushrooms. While hundreds of canvas shelters were ready to house the boys, it became evident that the Scouts intend to provide their own lodgings.

As soon as tents were up the boys found there was plenty else to do. Scoutmasters assigned them to such tasks as setting up exhibits and drawing supplies. Others were rehearsing for pageants they will present during the Jamboree.

The arena itself was a scene of work yesterday as carpenters, electricians and mechanics hurried to set up seats, install flood lights and finish the towering blockhouses which will be strategic centers for pageants.

Beginning Thursday night, the

Mayor Jackson Is Md. Aspirant For Governor

Announces Over Year in Advance; Assails Nice Regime.

By Franklyn Waltman.
A Staff Correspondent.

Baltimore, June 27.—Launching a heavy broadside at the Republican State administration, Mayor Howard W. Jackson today announced his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for Governor of Maryland.

Mayor Jackson tossed his hat into the Maryland gubernatorial ring 14 months in advance of the Democratic primary election and 16 months before the next State-wide election in November, 1938. His move was made at this time for strategic purposes.

In effect, Mayor Jackson has set himself up as the heir of the late Albert C. Ritchie, who held the gubernatorial reins of the State for 15 years. Other Democratic aspirants for the Maryland governorship—and there are several of them—now must challenge the Mayor of Baltimore.

Whether a sharp Democratic primary fight will take place over the Ritchie mantle will not be definitely known, in all probability, for several months. But veteran observers of Maryland politics doubt it and believe that as things now stand Mayor Jackson has the Democratic nomination clinched. Yet there are several outstanding Democrats who will not yield to Mayor

Versailles Treaty (What Hitler Left) Is 18 Years Old

Paris, June 27 (AP).—The Treaty of Versailles, 18 years old tomorrow, has been almost completely destroyed by Adolf Hitler's ax.

The continued separation of 1,803,879 square miles of territory in Europe, Africa, Asia and the Pacific Islands and about 17,000,000 persons from the fatherland today constituted almost the only tangible evidence the pact was still in effect.

Eighteen years of steady German hacking have left only the territorial and colonial clauses intact. The Nazi chancellor cut away most of the rest without war; but Frenchmen declare he will have to fight to make the maps over.

Thief Gets $50,000 in Jewels As Store Magnate Celebrates

By the United Press.

Port Chester, N. Y., June 27.—A lone burglar interrupted a two-day birthday celebration for wealthy Percy S. Straus, New York department store magnate, by walking into his home here early today and stealing $50,000 worth of jewelry.

The burglar shinnied up a concrete column to a second-story balcony some time after midnight, opened a wall safe and scooped out the contents, then passed through two other rooms picking up valuables as he went.

Straus himself discovered the theft at 4 a. m. He found the wall safe open and the jewelry gone. Further investigation disclosed that Mrs. Richard Weil, his sister who was a house guest for the week-end, had been robbed of a purse containing about $80 in cash.

In addition to Mr. and Mrs. Straus and his sister, there were nine servants in the house. Several other guests were there during the evening at a party given in honor of Straus' sixty-first birthday anniversary.

The other guests had left and the household retired about midnight. In a garage and lodge house on the 150-acre estate were 12 other servants and groundkeepers.

Straus, president of R. H. Macy & Co., New York department store, refused to talk to anyone but police about the burglary. The birthday party continued tonight in spite of the robbery.

Italians Lay Ship Sinking To Loyalists

Press Seems Preparing Setting for New 'Incident.'

Angry Attacks Made on 'The Long Arm of Bolshevism.'

By the United Press.

Rome (Monday), June 28.—The Fascist press appeared early today to be laying the groundwork for a new international "incident" with charges that a 2,300-ton Italian steamer was deliberately sunk by the Spanish loyalists.

Angry attacks on "the long arm of bolshevism" appeared on the front pages of almost every newspaper in connection with the sinking of the wheat-laden steamer Capo Pino in the Dardanelles early Friday, after it had been rammed by the Spanish loyalist tanker Magallenes in a dense fog.

"There was a premeditated plan by the Valencia Reds to create international complications," Il Popolo di Roma said.

The Italian steamer, sunk in the Dardanelles off Point Nagara, was abandoned by her crew before she sank. Inspired Fascist press messages, bearing Istanbal date lines, insisted that the 9,687-ton oil tanker "purposely" collided with the lighter Italian ship. The Spanish commander, it was said, refused to heed the Capo Pino's S O S appeals, but Turkish boats rescued the crew.

British, French Alarmed.

London, June 27 (AP).—British and French diplomats tonight faced with undisguised anxiety the task of restoring the international patrol of Spanish waters and preventing the manifold frictions involved from exploding in Europe's face.

They agreed that how far this can be accomplished depends largely on the replies of Berlin and Rome to the Anglo-French proposal that Britain and France use their own naval vessels to close the gap in the patrol left by the withdrawals of Italy and Germany.

This reply is expected Tuesday at a meeting of the sub-committee of the 27-nation "hands off Spain" committee.

Tuesday's decision can either "split the nations wide apart again" or create more friendly relations, said a French official spokesman in Paris.

Anxiety was intensified by the Spanish government's charge that a submarine yesterday sank the Cabo Palos, one of its merchant vessels. Valencia authorities did not mention the submarine's nationality, but they have insisted the insurgents have no submarines of their own. There was uneasiness in London over the possibility Valencia might attempt a "reprisal" against some German or Italian ship.

Sleeping Intruder Captured in Home Is Napping in Jail

Milton Gunn, a 22-year-old colored youth from Tuscumbia, Ala., slept himself into jail last night, and once there continued to sleep, even though there was a house-breaking charge against him.

He was captured—asleep—in the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. Stevens, in Cameron Valley, just outside of Alexandria, Va. The Stevenses, returning from a week-end trip last night, noticed a window was open. They tip-toed into the house. In the living room, on a couch, was a man, snoring.

Mr. and Mrs. Stevens ran to the home of a neighbor, telephoned Fairfax County police and Officer George P. McCann responded.

At the police station, the slumberer identified himself as Gunn. He said he was "just a-travellin'" when he got hungry and decided to raid the ice-box in the Stevens home. Then, having eaten, he became sleepy and the sight of the luxurious couch was too much for him.

Symbolic Statue of Hitler Is Inscribed 'Give Me Four Years' Time.'

Berlin, June 14.—An arresting poster catches the eye in all parts of Berlin today. Against a red sky, over a forest of factory chimneys belching forth black smoke, stands a gigantic figure of Der Fuhrer in his favorite semi-military tunic. His eyes, those of a mystic and dreamer, look upward. He wears no weapon, but in his hand is a sheaf of memoranda. Underneath, in big block letters, is his appeal to the German people: Gebt Mir Vier Jahre Zeit—Give Me Four Years' Time.

With this title a big exposition has for six weeks been running in Berlin and is now approaching its close. It is designed to illustrate both what the Nazi government has accomplished in the last four years of unbridled power and what it seeks to accomplish under the present four-year plan. Germans in tens of thousands, brought from every section of the country in state-organized excursions, have crowded the spacious halls and examined the various exhibits in greater or less detail. Among Berlin's 4,000,000 inhabitants there can be few adults who have not been out to Charlottenburg to see the show.

It is a masterpiece of effective mass suggestion, a triumph of that subtle artist in the field, Dr. Joseph Goebbels, the minister of propaganda. In spots the exposition is very daring, as in a striking oil painting showing Hitler addressing

U. S. Labor Act Change Urged By Vandenberg

Proposes Amendment to Give Employer Even Break in Law.

By Russell Smith.

Mounting restlessness on Capitol Hill over industrial conflict crystallized yesterday in a proposal by Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, for amendment of the national labor relations act.

Vandenberg's aim is to redress scales which he believes now are tipped too far in favor of the employes. The Senator said he will offer the amendments in the Senate this week.

"I believe that labor is entitled to a constantly broadening share in the fruits of its own production; but it will do labor no good to achieve these benefits if a profitable economy and an orderly society in which to enjoy them is jeopardized or destroyed," the Michigan Senator said.

In a statement, Vandenberg described the amendments as follows:

"The first amendment to be proposed by Senator Vandenberg will permit employers to share with employes the right to demand elections to determine majority rule for the purpose of establishing collective bargaining representatives. It would also permit subsequent repeated elections at the option of either party upon the termination or the breach of a contract. It would further require that an election must precede the assertion of any right of representation, thus obviating contentious claims respecting authority to act.

"The second amendment would require the agreement resulting voluntarily from collective bargaining to be set down in writing; but it would require that strikes may be called only by a majority vote of all employes; and it would provide that any breach of contract, if not corrected upon order of the National Labor Relations Board, shall suspend the right of representation, and shall subject the offender to whatever penalty the National Labor Relations Board may direct in respect to the exercise of further rights under the Wagner act—plus the right of the board to stop the collection of union dues and assessments during the period of discipline.

"The third amendment would parallel the existing "Fair Practice Code" for employers with a "Fair

Congress to Sit Till Bills Pass, Farley Asserts

Court and Reorganization Measures on Required List, He Says.

By Robert C. Albright,
A Staff Correspondent.

Annapolis, Md., June 27.—Hailed as a social success and a political enigma by the last delegation of departing Democrats the most unusual democratic reunion in party annals adjourned today with full agreement on only one question.

They had a good time.

But behind three days of fun-making and political camaraderie on Chesapeake's isolated Jefferson Island there emerged tonight the Administration's salient determination to hold Congress in session at least until formal action is taken on the judiciary and government reorganization bills.

Postmaster General James A. Farley, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, summed it all up in answer to the question: "When is Congress going to adjourn?"

"After they have passed the court bill and the executive reorganization bill," Farley answered.

"What about wages and hours legislation?" he was asked.

"I don't know about that," he said.

Big Farm Program Possible.

Homeward-bound Senate and House majority leaders were less definite about the program, but agreed adjournment of Congress is far in the offing.

Indication the President has yielded no part of his legislative program and that a thorough-going farm prospectus may be added to the Capitol gist was forthcoming in other quarters. A source close to the President said the President in the next few days might send a letter to chairmen of House and Senate Agriculture Committees urging action on Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace's ever-normal granary bill.

Wallace himself was less specific. "What about the farm program?" Wallace was asked.

"There might be something tomorrow," he replied.

"Where shall we look for it?" a reporter asked.

"On the Hill," answered Wallace. He declined to give further details.

May Revive Granary Plan.

In another quarter, it was pointed out that the President had planned to send a farm program message to Congress for some time, but recently had decided to write no further messages unless an emergency required one. This informant said what Mr. Roosevelt had to say about the ever-normal granary in a letter to Congressional committees would probably be of a general nature, tying it into the Administration's comprehensive farm plans. The disclosure came as a surprise, as aban-

Three Washingtonians Drown On Two River Fishing Parties

Sheriff's deputies and fishermen were draging the Potomac River near Morgantown, Md., last night for the bodies of a supervisor of the National Training School for Boys and a Capital divorcee drowned in a tragic finish of a Washington fishing party late Saturday night.

The dead:

Walter J. Lloyd, 50, supervisor at the National Training School for Boys.

Mrs. Elizabeth Bealle Bechhold, 28, 3293 Nineteenth street northwest.

William C. Zirkle, 43, steamfitter employed by the Washington Gas Light Co., also drowned near Shadyside, Md., when he fell from a 15-foot fishing boat late Saturday night.

Although he was an expert swimmer, he was hampered by clothes and rough water, and efforts by the captain of the boat, James Hathaway, who dove overboard to the rescue, proved futile. Four rowboats and a police boat were unable to recover the body yesterday.

Lloyd stood up in a 12-foot outboard motor boat to clear a fouled propeller and lost his balance. In falling he clutched Mrs. Bechhold and pulled her into the water after him. Neither was able to swim.

Lloyd and Mrs. Bechhold were fishing with her brother, Raymond S. Bealle, and Marie Dorsey, both of the Nineteenth street address.

Bealle nearly lost his life in an attempt to save his sister. He dived into the water and reached her side. Bealle told authorities at Morgantown that the young woman clamped a strangle hold around his

E. Chicago Mayor Pleads for Martial Law; Union Warning Issued.

Threatens to Meet 'Force With Force'

Dynamite, Gas Bombs Seized by Police in Ohio Sections.

By the Associated Press.

Youngstown, Ohio, June 27.—Tension in the seven-State steel strike centered in Indiana tonight as Mayor Andrew Rooney, of East Chicago, appealed to Gov. M. Clifford Townsend for State troops to preserve order when two steel firms attempt to reopen strike-closed plants Tuesday morning.

The Mayor acted after a mass meeting of 1,500 C. I. O. unionists at Indiana Harbor, Ind., warned the union would resist with force any attempt to reopen Inland Steel and Youngstown Sheet & Tube plants in East Chicago.

Company officials, who earlier had said they would reopen the plants as soon as "proper authorities" furnished protection, notified the Mayor the plants would reopen at 8 a. m. Tuesday.

Mayor Rooney then called on Gov. Townsend for aid, asking that martial law be declared in East Chicago.

The Governor said he would not act "unless unforeseen developments occur."

Mayor Rooney also telegraphed Sheriff Carroll Holley, of Lake County, asking his aid, and specifically requesting him to send an "adequate" number of deputies.

Meanwhile, the C. I. O. threatened "action" in a new field of steel production as the strike marked its thirty-second day.

Union Plans Action.

Clinton S. Golden, Pittsburgh regional director of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, notified E. T. Weir, chairman of the Weirton Steel Co., at Weirton, W. Va., that the union would "take such action as circumstances necessitate" to end alleged attacks on union employes in the Weirton mills.

He telegraphed Weir:

"Members of your notorious hatchet gang and so-called Security League have threatened, physically assaulted and driven from their employment in your mills with evident connivance and approval of your mill management officials, all of our union lodge officers."

The Weirton (W. Va.) plant has 10,000 men. Another Weirton plant at Steubenville, Ohio, employs 1,000 men.

Asked to explain what action was contemplated, Philip Murray, chairman of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, replied:

"Any legitimate action."

Meanwhile, the deadlock on the paramount issue of signed labor contracts—sought by John L. Lewis' C. I. O. from four independent steel producers—appeared as far from solution as ever.

The four companies involved are Republic, Bethlehem, Inland Steel and Youngstown Sheet & Tube.

Charges "Systematic Terror."

John Owens, C. I. O. director for Ohio, leader of the steel strike in the Mahoning Valley, charged in a telegram to Gov. Martin L. Davey of Ohio tonight that "a systematic campaign of terror is now being perpetrated" by Youngstown police and the sheriff of Mahoning County, aided by the Ohio National Guard, "against striking steel workers."

Owens charged two men had been unlawfully arrested, property destroyed and that a Youngstown home had been searched without a warrant. He also charged a man had been "assaulted by a company thug upon a public highway in the presence of police and National Guardsmen who stood idly by."

"We demand that property and lives of American citizens be protected against such violence and brutal measures and attacks and that you as a responsible official sworn to uphold the Constitution take immediate steps to end this terrorism and restore civil order," his telegram said.

"Our people can not and will not longer endure these practices and if you will not protect them they must take all necessary measures to protect themselves. The responsibility lies with you," the telegram concluded.

At Johnstown, Pa., a projected mass "invasion" by coal miners from western Pennsylvania to support steel strikers showed advance

Didn't Misquote Miss Perkins, Davey Insists

Says Secretary Declared She Wanted Girdler Held Till He Signed.

By the Associated Press.

Columbus, Ohio, June 27.—Gov. Martin L. Davey, acting to "clear up any misunderstanding," tonight reiterated his charge that Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins told him he "ought to have Tom Girdler and Frank Purnell subpenaed to Columbus and keep them there until they reach an agreement" in the steel strike.

Girdler is chairman of the Republic Steel Corporation and Purnell is president of the Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co.

Mrs. Perkins had denied she made any such "high-handed proposal" to Davey.

"Inasmuch as Secretary Perkins questioned the accuracy of my statement," Davey said, "I will tell the exact language that she used. She called me up and said:

"'We must not let the efforts of the mediation board fail. We cannot let our labor friends think that we have let them down.

McGrady Quoted.

"'I think you ought to keep those mills closed until a settlement is reached. Our lawyers have been studying your statutes and I understand you do not have the power of subpena, but your industrial commission does have that power. I think you ought to have Tom Girdler and Frank Purnell subpenaed to Columbus and keep them there until they reach an agreement.'

"Then she sent Assistant Secretary of Labor McGrady to see me the next day."

Davey said McGrady suggested the same action to him in a milder form.

"Then McGrady telephoned Secretary Perkins and told her I had refused to proceed on that basis. Finally Secretary Perkins asked for me and in our telephone conversation at that time she insisted that the original proposal be carried out.

"I do not question her sincerity or her right to make such a request. It is a difference in the point of view perhaps. At any rate my own intelligence must determine the conduct of the Ohio government. No issue is involved so far as the State is concerned except law and order, coupled with the protection of the rights of all our citizens."

The Governor said Union leaders who conferred with him Saturday asked him why Purnell and Girdler were not brought to Columbus.

Urged by Labor.

"I told them that this was almost exactly what Secretary Perkins had asked me to do in a telephone call Thursday evening. They said, 'Why not do it?'

"My answer," the Governor said, 'was 'we have no power under Ohio law to keep the mills closed.' It would amount to confiscation of private property; that it would be the exercise of high handed dictatorial power and could be quickly set aside by the court; that to use the powers of State government to force Mr. Girdler and Mr. Purnell to come to Columbus and keep them here in an effort to compell them to sign a contract which no law required them to do would be the most flagrant abuse of power ever attempted in this free country, and would, if done by private citizens, amount to kidnaping; that government in this country cannot do the things we condemn in Germany, Italy and Russia."

Van Zeeland Talks Shelved, Is Report

Paris, June 27 (U.P.).—Premier Paul Van Zeeland, of Belgium, and President Roosevelt have decided it would be unwise to attempt any world economic conference in the near future, the Washington correspondent of the agence economique reported today.

"No economic conference is possible immediately," the correspondent said. "It is not the international political situation which prevents such a meeting, however, but simply the fact that certain monetary and economic problems have not yet been sufficiently clarified to assure certain success.

New Illinois Legislator No Spellbinder; Sees Wagner Act as Cure for Strikes; Stands Solidly Behind New Deal.

If spellbinding, soapbox oratory is a prerequisite for the polished legislator, then kindly-looking Hugh M. Rigney should pack up and leave for home.

Homely in manner, unequivocal in his speech as a child, the 62-year-old Congressman from Arthur, Ill., has none of the trademarks of the expedient politician. And he would rather talk about newspaper make-up with you than bandy words about the Supreme Court.

Biographical sketch: He was born in Arthur, Moultrie County, Ill., the son of Dr. J. B. Rigney, regimental surgeon in the Union Army throughout the Civil War and pioneer physician of central Illinois; early in life he learned the printer's trade, and for 25 years edited and published the Arthur Graphic-Clarion; officiated as chairman of the Moultrie County Democratic central committee, 1930-1934; was a member of the executive committee Illinois Democratic Editorial Association; married and has two sons (both served in the World War); in 1934 was elected to the Illinois State Legislature, then resigned to take his present seat in the House; is a member of the House Postoffice Committee.

Commenting on the present wave of strikes, Rigney said the Wagner act is still an effective cure-all but that "it did not have a chance to work." He is confident reason finally will prevail and that within a short time the country will return to normalcy. As for the New Deal: "I was elected on a 'Back Roosevelt' slogan and I shall go along with the President."

Official Dies on Way To Daughter's Wedding

St. Louis, Mich., June 27 (A.P.).—State Representative Kircher, of Kawkawlin, was killed yesterday in an automobile accident while driving from an all-night session of the Legislature at Lansing to attend the wedding of a daughter.

Uninformed of the fatal accident, the daughter, Geraldine, was married at 8 a. m. in Kawkawlin to Adam T. Szeszulski, of Detroit. Coroner G. B. Wright said Kircher apparently fell asleep at the wheel of his motorcar, which struck a tree.

Head of U. S. Oil Branch Is Arrested in Turkey

Smyrna, Turkey, June 27 (A.P.).—The managers of Smyrna branches of three foreign oil companies were arrested today because they suspended sales rather than accept an officially ordered price reduction on gasoline and oil.

Congress to Sit Till Bills Pass, Farley Asserts

Court and Reorganization Measures on Required List, He Says.

donment of the Wallace plan to store in fat years to tide over lean had been generally forecast.

Another phase of the general farm program will be called in the House tomorrow—the controversial farm tenancy bill—leaders said. Economy negotiations for a cut in appropriation of $10,000,00 have left the outcome undetermined.

An omnibus reorganization bill was introduced in the Senate last week by Majority Leader Robinson, but no public hearings have been held. The House has split the bill into four parts, and has named subcommittees to frame them.

Court Fight Delayed.

Postponement of formal opening of the Senate court fight was announced by Senate Leader Robinson as he landed at Annapolis with returning Democratic picnickers.

"I do not anticipate that the court bill will be brought forth before the Fourth of July but I do anticipate it will be brought forward shortly thereafter,' said Robinson. He previously had indicated the bill "might" be brought up late this week.

Despite the flurry of disclosures that followed tonight's close of the three-day Jefferson Island's "family party," leaders insisted no business or serious talk was indulged in on the island.

Stanch friends and opponents of the President's court plan were among the 18 Senators participating in today's pilgrimage, but all insisted the court fight was only "jocularly" referred to.

Court Plan Vote Disputed.

En route to the island, Senator Burton K. Wheeler, of Montana, chairman of the Senate court plan opposition steering committee, reiterated Senate opponents could defeat either a four or a six-judge increase.

Asked about a two-judge "compromise," Wheeler said the opposition was prepared to stave off a vote on it if it took all summer. Returning to Annapolis tonight, Wheeler had nothing to add to his previous statement. Prior to the outing, court plan managers claimed 54 votes for a compromise.

One Senator who declined to permit use of his name, confidentially predicted adjournment of Congress in five weeks. Not even the most optimistic believe the court bill or compromise can be put through Congress in that time. Consensus is that adjournment by August 1 would entail postponement of court plan consideration or recommitting the bill.

One usually reliable informant said Majority Leader Robinson's nomination to the Supreme Court vacancy would be laid before the Senate as its very last piece of business.

Senator Robinson, president of the Jefferson Island Club, which sponsored the outing, was definitely pessimistic about adjournment prospects tonight.

"I have nothing to say about adjournment that would be pleasing to myself," said the Senate leader. "It looks to me like adjournment would be far in the offing—though I would be willing at any time."

Rayburn Unchanged.

House Majority Leader Sam Rayburn said nothing had happened on the trip to change his mind about adjournment.

"I have said right along I thought adjournment would come between August 15 and September 1," Rayburn said.

"I never regarded this outing as a business or political enterprise," said Robinson. "It had no significance in that respect other than that we had an opportunity for personal contacts not always possible in Washington."

Robinson listed the Interior supply bill and conference reports as the next items of business on the Senate calendar and intimated that conference differences between house and Senate on War Department bill might necessitate a resolution merely continuing this year's appropriations.

Hog Calling Is Feature.

Yesterday's Democratic merry-making on the bay followed closely that pattern of the earlier programs—with "hog calling" added as a feature. Three champion House hog callers vied in their prowess, rending the island with their shouts—Representative Mouton, of Louisiana; Wearin, of Iowa, and O'Connell. It was a no-decision bout, as was the day's baseball feature.

Teams were haphazardly organized, with House members and Senators scrambled on both nines and no attempt to divide them. Representative James M. Mead, of New York, who pitched for "Our Side," reported a 6-to-6 tie in the tenth.

"We put the decision up to the Supreme Court," he said.

Roosevelt Leaves Islands.

President Roosevelt left the islands last night aboard the U. S. S. Potomac, and will dock at the Navy Yard this morning. He was joined on the islands by Mr. and Mrs. John Boettiger, the President's daughter and son-in-law, and Mrs. James Roosevelt, who motored to Annapolis yesterday and boarded the Sequoia. James Roosevelt had his two-master schooner, Sewanna, at the islands, and was planning to return here aboard.

Only two Senators, Wheeler and King, of Utah, both court-plan opponents, were on hand at the dock here this morning when the regular contingent of naval patrol boats left for the islands. Others had arranged to come down later. Senator McAdoo, of California, had a submarine chaser waiting for them when they arrived at 10.

Returning Democrats tonight were hesitant to gauge the political effects of the outing, ostensibly designed to lessen growing party feeling. Like the informal exchanges between trenches during a welcome lull in pitched fighting, one said it at least formed a peaceful interlude between the battle on relief, which is passed, and friction on the court bill, that is to come.

indications of failing to live up to C. I. O. leaders' expectations.

Union spokesmen had said they expected "between 50,000 and 100,000 men" to attend a meeting at Faith's Grove in a natural amphitheater about 3 miles outside Johnstown.

A check of surrounding mining towns, however, showed that no mass movement was contemplated.

Seizure of dynamite and gas bombs was announced by police in the Ohio sections where order is being maintained by Ohio National Guardsmen. Shifts continued to change at the mills without incident.

At Canton, Ohio, police arrested Louis Simonelli in a parked car near the Republic steel plant and said they confiscated 16 sticks of dynamite with caps and fuses.

At Youngstown, Police Chief Carl L. Olson announced six gas bombs and one dynamite bomb had been found near a Youngstown Sheet and Tube plant gate.

While quiet reigned along the Ohio-Pennsylvania "midway" in the great strike front—on the 150-mile sector extending from Johnstown, Pa., to Warren, Ohio—renewed back-to-work activity developed in Illinois and Indiana.

More men trooped back to their jobs through picketless gates at Bethlehem Steel's Cambria works in Johnstown. Police supervisor, Capt. William A. Clark, estimated between 4,000 and 5,000 returned yesterday.

Union leaders, however, said picket lines will be thrown around the mill again tomorrow, the first day of regular operation since the back-to-work movement began, following Gov. George H. Earle's action in lifting matial law at 7 a. m. Friday.

"We will stop the operations," said James Mark, veteran white-haired C. I. O. leader.

In Youngstown, officials of the Republic Steel Corporation and Youngstown Sheet & Tube announced a total of 11,800 out of a possible force of 18,000 in reopened mills reported for work on two 12-hour shifts yesterday.

It was the first full day of the back-to-work movement under State militia protection.

Aerial Survey Plane Reaches New Brunswick

Port Washington, N. Y., June 27 (A.P.).—Pan-American Airways' survey plane reported by radio today its landing at Shediac, New Brunswick, after a five and one-half hour flight from Port Washington. The plane will continue on to Botwood, Newfoundland, before returning here Tuesday.

Pan-American officials said the trip would be the last before starting experimental transport flights across the Atlantic to England early in July. The huge plane carried its regular crew of six, and Government and company technicians.

'Bummed' Way Out After Newspaper Printed His Photograph.

Didn't "Hide My Tracks."

"I did nothing to hide my tracks," the paper's copyrighted story quoted Irwin. "I did not attempt to remove my fingerprints. That place (the Gedeon apartment) must have been full of my prints. I know I left my glove there."

"I got home at 6:30 a. m. I never went any place but home. I had washed off the blood in the bathroom. There was not a drop of blood on my clothes.

"I slept all day and woke up hearing them calling extras. I spent the next week in my room, coming out only at night."

At this point Irwin was quoted as blaming a friend, William Lamkle, for betraying him. Irwin was quoted:

"I saw him before I left New York on Sunday . . . He went to a lawyer friend who told the police it would be a good idea to ask Bob Irwin about the killings, that I was missing."

Irwin, the story said, then went to Philadelphia after checking his bag, containing pictures of Veronica's sister Ethel, in New York's Grand Central Station. On Monday he went to Washington.

"I bought a paper and saw my picture on the first page. I said to myself that the next guy I meet will recognize me."

Irwin related, the story said, that ultimate escape was not the driving force behind his movements.

"I have intended from the beginning to give myself up," the artist was quoted.

"I wanted to finish writing my book and send it to some publisher while I still was at large to make sales. I wanted money for my brothers Pember and Ben. I wanted to give them a decent chance in the world."

The paper said it learned that when Irwin left Washington he took a freight train out and "bummed" his way to Cleveland. Police in the latter city said Irwin registered at the small hotel where he lived on April 8, 11 days after the slayings in New York.

In an additional statement the Herald and Examiner said Irwin declared his original purpose was to kill Veronica's sister, Ethel, whom he said he loved, but who had married another man.

"I wanted to kill Ethel," the paper quoted Irwin, "because she was the dearest object in the world to me.

". . . If my plans had carried out as they were made I would have killed her only. I did not wish to kill anybody else. The fact that I killed three others was accidental."

The paper said Irwin declared he went to the Gedeon apartment to wait for Ethel. She was not there but her mother was.

He confessed, the paper added, that he hit Mrs. Gedeon when she ordered him from the apartment. She put up a terrific fight, the paper quoted him as saying. Then, the paper added, "Irwin said Veronica came in a short time later, and he held her for nearly two hours on a bed before he killed her, and then killed Byrnes before he left."

Today after Irwin went through the Bertillion room at the detective bureau he was taken to the "show-up" room on the eleventh floor of the building, with eight other men accused of various minor crimes. He was number four when the prisoners were lined up before a group of witnesses for identification.

Irwin, only one of the captives manacled, stood with his hat and coat on, under the hot white glare of the lights, and as Chief of Detectives John L. Sullivan questioned his fellow prisoners he seemed inwardly amused. He appeared to consider the proceedings in the light of nothing more than a huge joke.

Laughs in "Line-Up."

"Why are you here?" Asked Sullivan.

"A trip to New York," the prisoner replied.

"What did you do?" Sullivan asked. "Aren't you held for the three murders in New York Easter Sunday?"

Irwin chuckled and nodded his head in assent.

When the interview was over Irwin laughed again, and then was taken to Sullivan's office on a lower floor for further questioning and to await transportation back to the scene of the slayings.

After stating he was 29, born in Los Angeles, that his parents were dead and he had two brothers, Irwin said to Chief Sullivan:

"I'm not here to answer questions, if you'll pardon me. You seem to be a nice man. I've had to answer a great many questions.

"I have my own problems. I don't mean to be unco-operative. I would rather, if I must answer questions, talk to you alone instead of here with everybody gaping at me."

While handcuffed to an officer Irwin signed three copies of a statement waiving extradition to New York.

7-Man Board Proposed for Civil Service

Commission Criticized in Report of Reorganization Committee.

In a report bristling with adverse judgments upon the Civil Service Commission, President Roosevelt's reorganization committee yesterday sponsored a study recommending extension of the civil service to cover in all, save a few policy-making Federal jobs.

Together with this recommendation, the committee experts proposed creation of the position of personnel administrator, with a seven-man non-salaried board under him, the administrator to assume the powers now wielded by the commission.

The object of the changes primarily is to develop "a sound career service system" as part of the general program of reorganization of executive departments.

"It is difficult to attract good personnel to an organization that is faulty in structure, and it is likewise difficult to improve the structure of organization without the assistance of good personnel through whom to work," the authors said in emphasis of the relationship of the two matters.

The report was prepared by Floyd W. Reeves, of the University of Chicago, and Paul T. David, director of studies of the vocational education committee, for the reorganization committee, technically known as the President's Committee on Administrative Management.

Few Changes Made.

Although views of the two experts are not necessarily those of the committee, that they are substantially the same is indicated by inclusion, with little change, of most of the proposals in the revised reorganization bill offered in the Senate last week by Majority Floor Leader Joseph T. Robinson, of Arkansas.

In its criticisms of the Civil Service Commission, the report first praises the commission for "unwavering efforts to maintain and protect the merit system," then proceeded as follows:

"The commission has shown relatively little tendency," the report holds, "to interest itself in the coordination and developmental activities of an adequate central personnel agency. Its major interest appears to remain in the negative and restrictive activities attendant upon the enforcement of the civil service laws and rules, rather than in a positive and co-operative approach toward improved recruitment, placement, training and morale-building activities. It is questionable whether the commission and lack of constructive policy, are in its present form of organization is capable of such a positive approach."

Delays, emphasis on quantitative rather than qualitative standards, attributed to the commission in the report.

In substituting for the present commission a single administrator, the experts would give the new personnel officer a status co-ordinate with that of the director of the budget, have him chosen by the President after competitive examination and place in him complete responsibility for all Federal personnel matters.

The seven-man board which would assist him would be a non-salaried group of citizens, set up to act solely as a "watchdog of the merit system."

Major duties of the personnel administrator and his aides would be, in the language of the report:

"To assist the Chief Executive in developing his recommendations to the Congress respecting personnel legislation; to assist the Chief Executive in providing for the general regulation of the executive branch within his discretion in personnel matters; to assist the Chief Executive in maintaining a suitable amount of control over personnel administration throughout the executive branch; to assist the heads of major establishments in the development of effective organizations for personnel administration; to act as the central review agency for personnel classification and salary control; to provide the operating establishments with an adequate central recruiting, transfer and retirement service."

Retention of the Council of Personnel Administration "as a professionally competent advisory committee" to assist the personnel administrator and the President, "more adequate and responsible personnel officers" in the departments, and purging from emergency agencies any political basis, also are proposed.

3 Ex-Deputies Missing From Court in Harlan

Go to 'Lunch' as Arrest Is Ordered for Murder, Fail to Return.

By the Associated Press.

Harlan, Ky., June 27.—Three former Harlan County deputy sheriffs who announced they were "going to lunch" yesterday after County Judge Morris Saylor ordered their arrest on murder warrants hadn't come back yet today.

But the sheriff's office wasn't worried. Chief Deputy Sheriff Lee Ward said the three—Lee Fleenor, Henry Metcalf and George Lee—had notified the office they would submit to arrest tomorrow morning.

The warrants were issued at the request of Acting County Attorney George P. Pope after Judge Saylor concluded an examining trial by ordering Allen Bowlin and Perry Noe, also former deputies, held without bond for the August grand jury on charges they murdered former Deputy Washington (Wash) Irvin, 33, last Tuesday night.

Irvin was found slumped under the wheel of his automobile on Pine Mountain, near Harlan. There were three bullet wounds in his head.

Several witnesses testified they saw different ones of the accused men in the comupany of Irvin the night the former deputy was slain.

One witness, Cape White, said Ben Unthank was with Irvin, Fleenor, Lee and Noe in a Harlan restaurant Tuesday night.

No further mention was made of Unthank, whom Senate investigators sought during the recent Civil Liberties Committee investigation in Washington for questioning concerning Harlan labor condition.

Unthank, during the hearing, was termed the "head road killer" for Harlan soft coal operators.

Dismissal of Fleenor following a breach of peace hearing last Tuesday precipitated the immediate resignation of Bowlin, Irvin and Lee.

Judge Saylor later announced several others had either resigned or been dismissed, among them Noe and Metcalf.

Holdup Shooting Victim to Recover

Bernard Cohen, 28, Washington merchant, was expected by physicians in the South Baltimore General Hospital, last night to recover from a bullet fired into his chest Saturday night after he cried for assistance as two holdup men drove him through a suburb of the Maryland city in his car.

Cohen, operator of the French Shoppe, 704 Seventh street northwest, was seized by two young men as he was putting his automobile away in his garage at his home on Fairview avenue in Baltimore. The men forced him back into the machine, robbed him of $640 and drove away.

When Cohen called for help one of the bandits shot him. In Linthicum Heights, Md., along a lonely highway, the bandits pushed the wounded merchant from the machine. Residents heard his groans and took him to the hospital.

FERNANDO DE LOS RIOS.

American Unity Held at Stake If Franco Wins

Envoy Visions Italy and Reich Dominating South America.

By the Associated Press.

Madrid, June 27.—The outcome of the Spanish civil war is certain to have a powerful influence on the future of South America and indirectly affect the United States, Fernando de Los Rios, Spanish government Ambassador to Washington, said today.

The ambassador, completing a visit to Madrid during which he went to the front and saw the capital's defenses at first hand, said:

"There is no doubt that South American countries are watching with intense interest the outcome of the Spanish civil war. To them it is not merely a European struggle, but a matter of vital domestic concern. . . . A Fascist victory in Spain would surely have strong repercussions there."

Asked whether this might affect the United States with respect to the Monroe Doctrine and its relations with South American countries, he replied:

"There can be no doubt of the influence of race, thought and ideals exercised by Spain over all South American countries. Should they see Spain influenced by such dictatorial countries as Germany and Italy, the ideology and political influences of those two European nations would enter South America by way of Spain and would have a negative effect on the democratic spirit which the United States always has sought to maintain in the New World."

Commercially also, the ambassador said, South American countries would feel the influence of a Fascist Spain.

"The three nations which now have racial importance in South America are Spain, Italy and Germany," he continued, "and a triumph of Fascist ideas would influence the entire life of the peoples of South America, and a dream of a policy of unity for the two American continents would be destroyed."

Ambassador de Los Rios will leave tomorrow on his return trip to Washington. He sailed June 9 from New York for a Valencia government conference.

Hitler Warns Nazis Will Act Alone in Spain

200,000 Cheer Attack on Nonintervention Group's 'Failure.'

By the Associated Press.

Wurzberg, Germany, June 27.—Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler proclaimed today that Germany henceforth prefers independent action to protect herself from incidents off the Spanish coast.

The European nonintervention committee, he told a rally of 200,000 Nazis, demonstrated its ineffectiveness by failing to act after the cruiser Leipzig allegedly was attacked by a Spanish government submarine. (Valencia denied the attack.)

"Every cat can burn its paws once," he told the cheering audience. "Every man can make a mistake once. But only fools make it a second time."

"Neither I nor the German nation has any desire to enter upon such a danger a second time."

(Germany last week withdrew her warships from the nonintervention patrol after the Leipzig incident, because Britain and France declined to support a naval demonstration off the Spanish coast as a warning to the Valencia government.)

Hitler criticized both the committee and the foreign press. He said that after the pocket battleship Deutschland was attacked by two Spanish government planes in May, with loss of 31 lives, and Germany replied with bombardment of Almeria there was condemnation for Germany.

The foreign press asked that such incidents be referred to the nonintervention committee.

"I am always willing to learn," Hitler said with a tinge of sarcasm. "So after the Leipzig incident Germany appealed to the committee with the result that this body did not heed German demands."

This, he avowed, has proved clearly what Germany would face in the event of a more serious affair.

"From now on," the Fuehrer warned, "we will prefer in such cases to take the freedom, independence, honor and security of our nation into our own hands and protect ourselves alone."

Nazis Cheer King George.

Cassel, Germany, June 27 (AP).—England stole the show at a rally of 150,000 German war veterans today when two British speakers made impassioned pleas for understanding between Britain and Germany. Under the influence of their appeal the big open-air gathering closed with cheers for King George VI—an unusual proceeding in Germany, where, since the consolidation of Nazi power, all public demonstrations regularly close with cheers for Adolf Hitler only.

No foreigner was scheduled to speak at the rally, at which the principal oration was by Heinrich Himmler, Reich leader of the SS, or Hitler's guard troops. However, immediately after the officially approved program was finished and before the veterans could disperse their leader, Col. Reinhard, announced two British guests would speak.

They were Col. George A. Crossfield, representing the British Legion, and Capt. Roy Fyers, personal adjutant of the Duke of Connaught.

Col. Crossfield emphasized that regardless of any differences between the two nations "your comrades of the British Legion have the deepest respect for the German front fighters.

British veterans, he said, agree with German veterans that "every youth must be taught above all to love his own country and to defend it with his life—but also that this is no reason for hating other countries."

Capt. Fyers announced he brought by special command of the Duke of Connaught a decoration for the flag of the Duke's old German regiment—the Zeithen Hussars. When the decoration was affixed to the regimental standard the veterans shouted their approval.

Col. Reinhard led the 150,000 in cheers for Britain's King.

Didn't Misquote Miss Perkins, Davey Insists

Says Secretary Declared She Wanted Girdler Held Till He Signed.

By the Associated Press.

Columbus, Ohio, June 27.—Gov. Martin L. Davey, acting to "clear up any misunderstanding," tonight reiterated his charge that Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins told him he "ought to have Tom Girdler and Frank Purnell subpenaed to Columbus and keep them there until they reach an agreement" in the steel strike.

Girdler is chairman of the Republic Steel Corporation and Purnell is president of the Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co.

Mrs. Perkins had denied she made any such "high-handed proposal" to Davey.

"Inasmuch as Secretary Perkins questioned the accuracy of my statement," Davey said, "I will tell the exact language that she used. She called me up and said:

"'We must not let the efforts of the mediation board fail. We cannot let our labor friends think that we have let them down.

McGrady Quoted.

"'I think you ought to keep those mills closed until a settlement is reached. Our lawyers have been studying your statutes and I understand you do not have the power of subpena, but your industrial commission does have that power. I think you ought to have Tom Girdler and Frank Purnell subpenaed to Columbus and keep them there until they reach an agreement.'

"Then she sent Assistant Secretary of Labor McGrady to see me the next day."

Davey said McGrady suggested the same action to him in a milder form.

"Then McGrady telephoned Secretary Perkins and told her I had refused to proceed on that basis. Finally Secretary Perkins asked for me and in our telephone conversation at that time she insisted that the original proposal be carried out.

"I do not question her sincerity or her right to make such a request. It is a difference in the point of view perhaps. At any rate my own intelligence must determine the conduct of the Ohio government. No issue is involved so far as the State is concerned except law and order, coupled with the protection of the rights of all our citizens."

The Governor said Union leaders who conferred with him Saturday asked him why Purnell and Girdler were not brought to Columbus.

Urged by Labor.

"I told them that this was almost exactly what Secretary Perkins had asked me to do in a telephone call Thursday evening. They said, 'Why not do it?'

"My answer," the Governor said, "was 'we have no power under Ohio law to keep the mills closed.' It would amount to confiscation of private property; that it would be the exercise of high handed dictatorial power and could be quickly set aside by the court; that to use the powers of State government to force Mr. Girdler and Mr. Purnell to come to Columbus and keep them here in an effort to compell them to sign a contract which no law required them to do would be the most flagrant abuse of power ever attempted in this free country, and would, if done by private citizens, amount to kidnaping; that government in this country cannot do the things we condemn in Germany, Italy and Russia."

Van Zeeland Talks Shelved, Is Report

Paris, June 27 (U.P.).—Premier Paul Van Zeeland, of Belgium, and President Roosevelt have decided it would be unwise to attempt any world economic conference in the near future, the Washington correspondent of the agence economique reported today.

"No economic conference is possible immediately," the correspondent said. "It is not the international political situation which prevents such a meeting, however, but simply the fact that certain monetary and economic problems have not yet been sufficiently clarified to assure certain success.

"The principal obstacles are attributed to England."

New Faces in Congress

Representative Rigney Likes Newspapers More Than Politics

New Illinois Legislator No Spellbinder; Sees Wagner Act as Cure for Strikes; Stands Solidly Behind New Deal.

If spellbinding, soapbox oratory is a prerequisite for the polished legislator, then kindly-looking Hugh M. Rigney should pack up and leave for home.

Homely in manner, unequivocal in his speech as a child, the 62-year-old Congressman from Arthur, Ill., has none of the trademarks of the expedient politician. And he would rather talk about newspaper make-up with you than bandy words about the Supreme Court.

Biographical sketch: He was born in Arthur, Moultrie County, Ill., the son of Dr. J. B. Rigney, regimental surgeon in the Union Army throughout the Civil War and pioneer physician of central Illinois; early in life he learned the printer's trade, and for 25 years edited and published the Arthur Graphic-Clarion; officiated as chairman of the Moultrie County Democratic central committee, 1930-1934; was a member of the executive committee Illinois Democratic Editorial Association; married and has two sons (both served in the World War); in 1934 was elected to the Illinois State Legislature, then resigned to take his present seat in the House; is a member of the House Postoffice Committee.

Commenting on the present wave of strikes, Rigney said the Wagner act is still an effective cure-all but that "it did not have a chance to work." He is confident reason finally will prevail and that within a short time the country will return to normalcy. As for the New Deal: "I was elected on a 'Back Roosevelt' slogan and I shall go along with the President."

Official Dies on Way To Daughter's Wedding

St. Louis, Mich., June 27 (A.P.).—State Representative Kircher, of Kawkawlin, was killed yesterday in an automobile accident while driving from an all-night session of the Legislature at Lansing to attend the wedding of a daughter.

Uninformed of the fatal accident, the daughter, Geraldine, was married at 8 a. m. in Kawkawlin to Adam T. Szeszulski, of Detroit. Coroner G. B. Wright said Kircher apparently fell asleep at the wheel of his motorcar, which struck a tree.

Head of U. S. Oil Branch Is Arrested in Turkey

Smyrna, Turkey, June 27 (A.P.).—The managers of Smyrna branches of three foreign oil companies were arrested today because they suspended sales rather than accept an officially ordered price reduction on gasoline and oil.

Manager Arthur W. Drake of the American Socony-Vacuum Oil Co. and managers for the British Shell and Rumanian Steaua companies, later were released but officials said they must stand trial.

Congress to Sit Till Bills Pass, Farley Asserts

Court and Reorganization Measures on Required List, He Says.

donment of the Wallace plan to store in fat years to tide over lean had been generally forecast.

Another phase of the general farm program will be called in the House tomorrow—the controversial farm tenancy bill—leaders said. Economy negotiations for a cut in appropriation of $10,000,00 have left the outcome undetermined.

An omnibus reorganization bill was introduced in the Senate last week by Majority Leader Robinson, but no public hearings have been held. The House has split the bill into four parts, and has named subcommittees to frame them.

Court Fight Delayed.

Postponement of formal opening of the Senate court fight was announced by Senate Leader Robinson as he landed at Annapolis with returning Democratic picnickers.

"I do not anticipate that the court bill will be brought forth before the Fourth of July but I do anticipate it will be brought forward shortly thereafter,' said Robinson. He previously had indicated the bill "might" be brought up late this week.

Despite the flurry of disclosures that followed tonight's close of the three-day Jefferson Island's "family party," leaders insisted no business or serious talk was indulged in on the island.

Stanch friends and opponents of the President's court plan were among the 18 Senators participating in today's pilgrimage, but all insisted the court fight was only "jocularly" referred to.

Court Plan Vote Disputed.

En route to the island, Senator Burton K. Wheeler, of Montana, chairman of the Senate court plan opposition steering committee, reiterated Senate opponents could defeat either a four or a six-judge increase.

Asked about a two-judge "compromise," Wheeler said the opposition was prepared to stave off a vote on it if it took all summer. Returning to Annapolis tonight, Wheeler had nothing to add to his previous statement. Prior to the outing, court plan managers claimed 54 votes for a compromise.

One Senator who declined to permit use of his name, confidentially predicted adjournment of Congress in five weeks. Not even the most optimistic believe the court bill or compromise can be put through Congress in that time. Consensus is that adjournment by August 1 would entail postponement of court plan consideration or recommitting the bill.

One usually reliable informant said Majority Leader Robinson's nomination to the Supreme Court vacancy would be laid before the Senate as its very last piece of business.

Senator Robinson, president of the Jefferson Island Club, which sponsored the outing, was definitely pessimistic about adjournment prospects tonight.

"I have nothing to say about adjournment that would be pleasing to myself," said the Senate leader. "It looks to me like adjournment would be far in the offing—though I would be willing at any time."

Rayburn Unchanged.

House Majority Leader Sam Rayburn said nothing had happened on the trip to change his mind about adjournment.

"I have said right along I thought adjournment would come between August 15 and September 1," Rayburn said.

"I never regarded this outing as a business or political enterprise," said Robinson. "It had no significance in that respect other than that we had an opportunity for personal contacts not always possible in Washington."

Robinson listed the Interior supply bill and conference reports as the next items of business on the Senate calendar and intimated that conference differences between house and Senate on War Department bill might necessitate a resolution merely continuing this year's appropriations.

Hog Calling Is Feature.

Yesterday's Democratic merry-making on the bay followed closely that pattern of the earlier programs—with "hog calling" added as a feature. Three champion House hog callers vied in their prowess, rending the island with their shouts—Representative Mouton, of Louisiana; Wearin, of Iowa, and O'Connell. It was a no-decision bout, as was the day's baseball feature.

Teams were haphazardly organized, with House members and Senators scrambled on both nines and no attempt to divide them. Representative James M. Mead, of New York, who pitched for "Our Side," reported a 6-to-6 tie in the tenth.

"We put the decision up to the Supreme Court," he said.

Roosevelt Leaves Islands.

President Roosevelt left the islands last night aboard the U. S. S. Potomac, and will dock at the Navy Yard this morning. He was joined on the islands by Mr. and Mrs. John Boettiger, the President's daughter and son-in-law, and Mrs. James Roosevelt, who motored to Annapolis yesterday and boarded the Sequoia. James Roosevelt had his two-master schooner, Sewanna, at the islands, and was planning to return here aboard.

Only two Senators, Wheeler and King, of Utah, both court-plan opponents, were on hand at the dock here this morning when the regular contingent of naval patrol boats left for the islands. Others had arranged to come down later. Senator McAdoo, of California, had a submarine chaser waiting for them when they arrived at 10.

Returning Democrats tonight were hesitant to gauge the political effects of the outing, ostensibly designed to lessen growing party feeling. Like the informal exchanges between trenches, during a welcome lull in pitched fighting, one said it at least formed a peaceful interlude between the battle on relief, which is passed, and friction on the court bill, that is to come.

indications of failing to live up to C. I. O. leaders' expectations.

Union spokesmen had said they expected "between 50,000 and 100,000 men" to attend a meeting at Faith's Grove in a natural amphitheater about 3 miles outside Johnstown.

A check of surrounding mining towns, however, showed that no mass movement was contemplated.

Seizure of dynamite and gas bombs was announced by police in the Ohio sections where order is being maintained by Ohio National Guardsmen. Shifts continued to change at the mills without incident.

At Canton, Ohio, police arrested Louis Simonelli in a parked car near the Republic steel plant and said they confiscated 16 sticks of dynamite with caps and fuses.

At Youngstown, Police Chief Carl L. Olson announced six gas bombs and one dynamite bomb had been found near a Youngstown Sheet and Tube plant gate.

While quiet reigned along the Ohio-Pennsylvania "midway" in the great strike front—on the 150-mile sector extending from Johnstown, Pa., to Warren, Ohio—renewed back-to-work activity developed in Illinois and Indiana.

More men trooped back to their jobs through picketless gates at Bethlehem Steel's Cambria works in Johnstown. Police supervisor, Capt. William A. Clark, estimated between 4,000 and 5,000 returned yesterday.

Union leaders, however, said picket lines will be thrown around the mill again tomorrow, the first day of regular operation since the back-to-work movement began, following Gov. George H. Earle's action in lifting matial law at 7 a. m. Friday.

"We will stop the operations," said James Mark, veteran white-haired C. I. O. leader.

In Youngstown, officials of the Republic Steel Corporation and Youngstown Sheet & Tube announced a total of 11,800 out of a possible force of 18,000 in reopened mills reported for work on two 12-hour shifts yesterday.

It was the first full day of the back-to-work movement under State militia protection.

Aerial Survey Plane Reaches New Brunswick

Port Washington, N. Y., June 27 (A.P.).—Pan-American Airways' survey plane reported by radio today its landing at Shediac, New Brunswick, after a five and one-half hour flight from Port Washington. The plane will continue on to Botwood, Newfoundland, before returning here Tuesday.

Pan-American officials said the trip would be the last before starting experimental transport flights across the Atlantic to England early in July. The huge plane carried its regular crew of six, and Government and company technicians.

'Bummed' Way Out After Newspaper Printed His Photograph.

Didn't "Hide My Tracks."

"I did nothing to hide my tracks," the paper's copyrighted story quoted Irwin. "I did not attempt to remove my fingerprints. That place (the Gedeon apartment) must have been full of my prints. I know I left my glove there."

"I got home at 6:30 a. m. I never went any place but home. I had washed off the blood in the bathroom. There was not a drop of blood on my clothes.

"I slept all day and woke up hearing them calling extras. I spent the next week in my room, coming out only at night."

At this point Irwin was quoted as blaming a friend, William Lamkle, for betraying him. Irwin was quoted:

"I saw him before I left New York on Sunday . . . He went to a lawyer friend who told the police it would be a good idea to ask Bob Irwin about the killings, that I was missing."

Irwin, the story said, then went to Philadelphia after checking his bag, containing pictures of Veronica's sister Ethel, in New York's Grand Central Station. On Monday he went to Washington.

"I bought a paper and saw my picture on the first page. I said to myself that the next guy I meet will recognize me."

Irwin related, the story said, that ultimate escape was not the driving force behind his movements.

"I have intended from the beginning to give myself up," the artist was quoted.

"I wanted to finish writing my book and send it to some publisher while I still was at large to make sales. I wanted money for my brothers Pember and Ben. I wanted to give them a decent chance in the world."

The paper said it learned that when Irwin left Washington he took a freight train out and "bummed" his way to Cleveland. Police in the latter city said Irwin registered at the small hotel where he lived on April 8, 11 days after the slayings in New York.

In an additional statement the Herald and Examiner said Irwin declared his original purpose was to kill Veronica's sister, Ethel, whom he said he loved, but who had married another man.

"I wanted to kill Ethel," the paper quoted Irwin, "because she was the dearest object in the world to me.

". . . If my plans had carried out as they were made I would have killed her only. I did not wish to kill anybody else. The fact that I killed three others was accidental."

The paper said Irwin declared he went to the Gedeon apartment to wait for Ethel. She was not there but her mother was.

He confessed, the paper added, that he hit Mrs. Gedeon when she ordered him from the apartment. She put up a terrific fight, the paper quoted him as saying. Then, the paper added, "Irwin said Veronica came in a short time later, and he held her for nearly two hours on a bed before he killed her, and then killed Byrnes before he left."

Today after Irwin went through the Bertillion room at the detective bureau he was taken to the "show-up" room on the eleventh floor of the building, with eight other men accused of various minor crimes. He was number four when the prisoners were lined up before a group of witnesses for identification.

Irwin, only one of the captives manacled, stood with his hat and coat on, under the hot white glare of the lights, and as Chief of Detectives John L. Sullivan questioned his fellow prisoners he seemed inwardly amused. He appeared to consider the proceedings in the light of nothing more than a huge joke.

Laughs in "Line-Up."

"Why are you here?" Asked Sullivan.

"A trip to New York," the prisoner replied.

"What did you do?" Sullivan asked. "Aren't you held for the three murders in New York Easter Sunday?"

Irwin chuckled and nodded his head in assent.

When the interview was over Irwin laughed again, and then was taken to Sullivan's office on a lower floor for further questioning and to await transportation back to the scene of the slayings.

After stating he was 29, born in Los Angeles, that his parents were dead and he had two brothers, Irwin said to Chief Sullivan:

"I'm not here to answer questions, if you'll pardon me. You seem to be a nice man. I've had to answer a great many questions.

"I have my own problems. I don't mean to be unco-operative. I would rather, if I must answer questions, talk to you alone instead of here with everybody gaping at me."

While handcuffed to an officer Irwin signed three copies of a statement waiving extradition to New York.

7-Man Board Proposed for Civil Service

Commission Criticized in Report of Reorganization Committee.

In a report bristling with adverse judgments upon the Civil Service Commission, President Roosevelt's reorganization committee yesterday sponsored a study recommending extension of the civil service to cover in all, save a few policy-making Federal jobs.

Together with this recommendation, the committee experts proposed creation of the position of personnel administrator, with a seven-man non-salaried board under him, the administrator to assume the powers now wielded by the commission.

The object of the changes primarily is to develop "a sound career service system" as part of the general program of reorganization of executive departments.

"It is difficult to attract good personnel to an organization that is faulty in structure, and it is likewise difficult to improve the structure of organization without the assistance of good personnel through whom to work," the authors said in emphasis of the relationship of the two matters.

The report was prepared by Floyd W. Reeves, of the University of Chicago, and Paul T. David, director of studies of the vocational education committee, for the reorganization committee, technically known as the President's Committee on Administrative Management.

Few Changes Made.

Although views of the two experts are not necessarily those of the committee, that they are substantially the same is indicated by inclusion, with little change, of most of the proposals in the revised reorganization bill offered in the Senate last week by Majority Floor Leader Joseph T. Robinson, of Arkansas.

In its criticisms of the Civil Service Commission, the report first praises the commission for "unwavering efforts to maintain and protect the merit system," then proceeded as follows:

"The commission has shown relatively little tendency," the report holds, "to interest itself in the coordination and developmental activities of an adequate central personnel agency. Its major interest appears to remain in the negative and restrictive activities attendant upon the enforcement of the civil service laws and rules, rather than in a positive and co-operative approach toward improved recruitment, placement, training and morale-building activities. It is questionable whether the commission and lack of constructive policy, are in its present form of organization is capable of such a positive approach."

Delays, emphasis on quantitative rather than qualitative standards, attributed to the commission in the report.

In substituting for the present commission a single administrator, the experts would give the new personnel officer a status co-ordinate with that of the director of the budget, have him chosen by the President after competitive examination and place in him complete responsibility for all Federal personnel matters.

The seven-man board which would assist him would be a non-salaried group of citizens, set up to act solely as a "watchdog of the merit system."

Major duties of the personnel administrator and his aides would be, in the language of the report:

"To assist the Chief Executive in developing his recommendations to the Congress respecting personnel legislation; to assist the Chief Executive in providing for the general regulation of the executive branch within his discretion in personnel matters; to assist the Chief Executive in maintaining a suitable amount of control over personnel administration throughout the executive branch; to assist the heads of major establishments in the development of effective organizations for personnel administration; to act as the central review agency for personnel classification and salary control; to provide the operating establishments with an adequate central recruiting, transfer and retirement service."

Retention of the Council of Personnel Administration "as a professionally competent advisory committee" to assist the personnel administrator and the President, "more adequate and responsible personnel officers" in the departments, and purging from emergency agencies any political basis, also are proposed.

3 Ex-Deputies Missing From Court in Harlan

Go to 'Lunch' as Arrest Is Ordered for Murder, Fail to Return.

By the Associated Press.

Harlan, Ky., June 27.—Three former Harlan County deputy sheriffs who announced they were "going to lunch" yesterday after County Judge Morris Saylor ordered their arrest on murder warrants hadn't come back yet today.

But the sheriff's office wasn't worried. Chief Deputy Sheriff Lee Ward said the three—Lee Fleenor, Henry Metcalf and George Lee—had notified the office they would submit to arrest tomorrow morning.

The warrants were issued at the request of Acting County Attorney George P. Pope after Judge Saylor concluded an examining trial by ordering Allen Bowlin and Perry Noe, also former deputies, held without bond for the August grand jury on charges they murdered former Deputy Washington (Wash) Irvin, 33, last Tuesday night.

Irvin was found slumped under the wheel of his automobile on Pine Mountain, near Harlan. There were three bullet wounds in his head.

Several witnesses testified they saw different ones of the accused men in the comupany of Irvin the night the former deputy was slain.

One witness, Cape White, said Ben Unthank was with Irvin, Fleenor, Lee and Noe in a Harlan restaurant Tuesday night.

No further mention was made of Unthank, whom Senate investigators sought during the recent Civil Liberties Committee investigation in Washington for questioning concerning Harlan labor condition.

Unthank, during the hearing, was termed the "head road killer" for Harlan soft coal operators.

Dismissal of Fleenor following a breach of peace hearing last Tuesday precipitated the immediate resignation of Bowlin, Irvin and Lee.

Judge Saylor later announced several others had either resigned or been dismissed, among them Noe and Metcalf.

Holdup Shooting Victim to Recover

Bernard Cohen, 28, Washington merchant, was expected by physicians in the South Baltimore General Hospital, last night to recover from a bullet fired into his chest Saturday night after he cried for assistance as two holdup men drove him through a suburb of the Maryland city in his car.

Cohen, operator of the French Shoppe, 704 Seventh street northwest, was seized by two young men as he was putting his automobile away in his garage at his home on Fairview avenue in Baltimore. The men forced him back into the machine, robbed him of $640 and drove away.

When Cohen called for help one of the bandits shot him. In Linthicum Heights, Md., along a lonely highway, the bandits pushed the wounded merchant from the machine. Residents heard his groans and took him to the hospital.

American Unity Held at Stake If Franco Wins

Envoy Visions Italy and Reich Dominating South America.

By the Associated Press.

Madrid, June 27.—The outcome of the Spanish civil war is certain to have a powerful influence on the future of South America and indirectly affect the United States, Fernando de Los Rios, Spanish government Ambassador to Washington, said today.

The ambassador, completing a visit to Madrid during which he went to the front and saw the capital's defenses at first hand, said:

"There is no doubt that South American countries are watching with intense interest the outcome of the Spanish civil war. To them it is not merely a European struggle, but a matter of vital domestic concern. . . . A Fascist victory in Spain would surely have strong repercussions there."

Asked whether this might affect the United States with respect to the Monroe Doctrine and its relations with South American countries, he replied:

"There can be no doubt of the influence of race, thought and ideals exercised by Spain over all South American countries. Should they see Spain influenced by such dictatorial countries as Germany and Italy, the ideology and political influences of those two European nations would enter South America by way of Spain and would have a negative effect on the democratic spirit which the United States always has sought to maintain in the New World."

Commercially also, the ambassador said, South American countries would feel the influence of a Fascist Spain.

"The three nations which now have racial importance in South America are Spain, Italy and Germany," he continued, "and a triumph of Fascist ideas would influence the entire life of the peoples of South America, and a dream of a policy of unity for the two American continents would be destroyed."

Ambassador de Los Rios will leave tomorrow on his return trip to Washington. He sailed June 9 from New York for a Valencia government conference.

200,000 Cheer Attack on Nonintervention Group's 'Failure.'

By the Associated Press.

Wurzberg, Germany, June 27.—Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler proclaimed today that Germany henceforth prefers independent action to protect herself from incidents off the Spanish coast.

The European nonintervention committee, he told a rally of 200,000 Nazis, demonstrated its ineffectiveness by failing to act after the cruiser Leipzig allegedly was attacked by a Spanish government submarine. (Valencia denied the attack.)

"Every cat can burn its paws once," he told the cheering audience. "Every man can make a mistake once. But only fools make it a second time."

"Neither I nor the German nation has any desire to enter upon such a danger a second time."

(Germany last week withdrew her warships from the nonintervention patrol after the Leipzig incident, because Britain and France declined to support a naval demonstration off the Spanish coast as a warning to the Valencia government.)

Hitler criticized both the committee and the foreign press. He said that after the pocket battleship Deutschland was attacked by two Spanish government planes in May, with loss of 31 lives, and Germany replied with bombardment of Almeria there was condemnation for Germany.

The foreign press asked that such incidents be referred to the nonintervention committee.

"I am always willing to learn," Hitler said with a tinge of sarcasm. "So after the Leipzig incident Germany appealed to the committee with the result that this body did not heed German demands."

This, he avowed, has proved clearly what Germany would face in the event of a more serious affair.

"From now on," the Fuehrer warned, "we will prefer in such cases to take the freedom, independence, honor and security of our nation into our own hands and protect ourselves alone."

Nazis Cheer King George.

Cassel, Germany, June 27 (AP).—England stole the show at a rally of 150,000 German war veterans today when two British speakers made impassioned pleas for understanding between Britain and Germany. Under the influence of their appeal the big open-air gathering closed with cheers for King George VI—an unusual proceeding in Germany, where, since the consolidation of Nazi power, all public demonstrations regularly close with cheers for Adolf Hitler only.

No foreigner was scheduled to speak at the rally, at which the principal oration was by Heinrich Himmler, Reich leader of the SS, or Hitler's guard troops. However, immediately after the officially approved program was finished and before the veterans could disperse their leader, Col. Reinhard, announced two British guests would speak.

They were Col. George A. Crossfield, representing the British Legion, and Capt. Roy Fyers, personal adjutant of the Duke of Connaught.

Col. Crossfield emphasized that regardless of any differences between the two nations "your comrades of the British Legion have the deepest respect for the German front fighters.

British veterans, he said, agree with German veterans that "every youth must be taught above all to love his own country and to defend it with his life—but also that this is no reason for hating other countries."

Capt. Fyers announced he brought by special command of the Duke of Connaught a decoration for the flag of the Duke's old German regiment—the Zeithen Hussars. When the decoration was affixed to the regimental standard the veterans shouted their approval.

Col. Reinhard led the 150,000 in cheers for Britain's King.

Revenue, Costs Likely to Pass U. S. Forecasts

Government Income May Be 50, Outgo 200 Millions More.

By the Associated Press.

The Government's income and outgo for the 1937 fiscal year appeared likely yesterday to exceed the official estimates.

The year ends Wednesday midnight. Latest figures indicated that total revenue will top the estimates by about $50,000,000 and that spending will climb $200,000,000 above the predicted figure.

The net deficit already is $114,000,000 more than the $2,557,000,000 mentioned in President Roosevelt's revised estimate last April. The net deficit figure does not include $104,000,000 spent for debt retirement.

When this fiscal period ends, the public debt is expected to stand at about $36,300,000,000. This would be about $300,000,000 less than the all-time high of June 15, but would top the debt of a year ago by $2,200,000,000.

Climbs 20 Billion.

Since the Government's surpluses melted into deficits in 1931, the public debt has climbed $20,115,000,000, reaching $36,388,000,000 on June 23, the latest date for which figures are available.

With only one week of this fiscal period unreported, a Treasury compilation showed revenues since last July 1 have totaled $5,192,636,000. Should collections continue at the current rate, the total would reach about $5,275,000,000 on June 30, compared with Mr. Roosevelt's forecast of $5,224,000,000.

Under Original Forecast.

The expected total, however, still would be $553,000,000 under the President's original revenue estimate last January. This forecast was revised after March income tax collections fell 17 per cent under estimates.

On the spending side, the Treasury reports indicate aggregate outlays of about $8,000,000,000, exclusive of debt retirement. This would be $219,000,000 over the revised forecast and $76,000,000 under the original estimate.

Relief continued to be the largest spending item this year. WPA outlays totaled $1,864,000,000 through June 23, or 23 per cent of aggregate expenditures.

Spirits Rectifiers Ask Repeal of Tax

The League of Distilled Spirits Rectifiers, Inc., meeting here yesterday, went on record in favor of repeal by Congress of the 30-cent-per-gallon tax on rectified spirits and expressed opposition to interstate tariff walls affecting importation of alcoholic beverages.

Terming the special tax on blended whiskies an "inequitable relic of World War days and a discrimination against the rectifiers," Felix V. Goldsborough, of Baltimore, president of the league, declared the levy should be repealed at this session of Congress.

With independent rectifiers in attendance from the East and Middle West, the league met yesterday afternoon in its offices in the Woodward Building on the eve of today's hearing before Federal Alcohol Adimnistrator Wilford S. Alexander at the Mayflower Hotel at 10 a. m.

NLRB Is 'Dilatory,' Charge by Pastor

By the Associated Press.

The Rev. Reginald B. Maugle, pastor of the Resurrection Lutheran Church, Philadelphia, accused the National Labor Relations Board yesterday of "dilatory tactics" in failing to certify a collective bargaining agency for workers at the Apex Hosiery Co.

"The welfare of workers throughout the country," he said in a letter to the board, "has been vitally and adversely affected in the failure of the National Labor Relations Board to take prompt action in cases of collective bargaining where a clear majority of the employes are in favor of an election.

"In one community alone more than 2,000 workers are being deprived of their livelihood because of the dilatory tactics of the board. Specifically, I refer to the failure of the board in the case of the Apex Hosiery Co., of Philadelphia, either to recognize an election which was held at the instance of the employes and with strictest impartiality, or order a second election under the auspices of the board immediately."

D. C. Yale Student Held in Auto Death

West Warwick, R. I., June 27 (AP).—John G. Rafter, 20, of Washington, a Yale University student, was bound over to the grand jury in District Court here today on a charge of driving dangerously, resulting in the death of a 44-year-old pedestrian near here yesterday. Bond was set at $4,000.

Rafter pleaded nolo to another charge of leaving the scene of an accident. He appealed a $100 fine on this charge and was released in bail of $1,000.

Rafter told State police that a man, later identified as Joseph J. Pothier, of Coventry, R. I., had stepped out of the darkness into the path of his car.

Maverick Defends Steel Organizing

Baltimore, June 27 (AP).—Representative Maury Maverick, Texas Democrat, told a meeting of steel workers here today John L. Lewis' unionization of steel workers is not the action of a "ruthless dictator" but is instead part of a "major sweep of the American working people to organize for the preservation of their rights."

Later on, Maverick remarked: "It has been said that Lewis wants to be President. If he does—what of it? If he demonstrates capability, why shouldn't he be a candidate?"

Samuel P. Herold's Rites in Arlington

With military honors, Samuel P. Herold, 42, employe in the finance division of the War Department, was buried Saturday in Arlington National Cemetery.

Herald committed suicide by drowning in the shallow waters off Hains Point early Thursday in one of the most bizarre cases the District has known.

Herold, severely wounded in the right side and shell-shocked in France, drowned himself in 2 feet of water after a passerby, Ernest C. Marlette, of the 1700 block of Eighteenth street, talked with him for half an hour in the hope of dissuading him from his contemplated act.

He enlisted in the District National Guard in September, 1916, and went to France with the A. E. F. late in 1917.

His wife, two sons and two daughters survive.

his first little group of followers in the days when the Nazi movement existed only in his mind. As its title this picture has the biblical quotation, "In the Beginning Was the Word."

And always the exposition is interesting. For its obvious intent is to show the Germans not what Hitler has done for them but what he has permitted them to do for themselves. Passing before the exhibits, watching the pride and pleasure with which the crowd examined them, I really understood for the first time why the present dictatorship is as popular with the mass of German people as is unquestionably the case. It has restored to them their faith in themselves as individuals, their belief in their nation as a desirable society, and their pride in their race as one of the leading divisions of mankind.

There can be no understanding of present-day Germany without realization that the present regime is today popular with the people.

There are many Germans, of many types, who do not like it. The Communist organization still persists under the surface and still sometimes circulates through the mails pathetic little copies of its once powerful paper, "The Red Flag." At the other extreme the old aristocracy will gradually express bitterness at the way the Nazis have leveled downward the great heritage of German culture. In between are numerous liberals, scholars and professional men who do not hesitate to describe their country today as a very orderly prison.

There must be thousands who feel degraded by reason of the racial persecutions and biological farrago of the Hitler regime. But when this is said and done its popularity with the masses is still to be admitted.

Rests on Many Factors.

This popularity rests on many factors. Tangible achievement is one of the most important. Today, for instance, the official unemployment figures, as of the end of May, were published. They show a decrease during that month of 184,000 in the number of unemployed, bringing the total without work in Germany down to the relatively trivial figure of 776,000. This is to be compared with the nearly 7,000,000 who were registered as workless at the beginning of 1933.

Of course this improvement must be severely qualified, in a way which no German newspaper would dare to attempt. The very real gain in employment has been accompanied by a perceptible decline in the real earnings of labor. While nominal wages have remained stationary, or even advanced a trifle, during the past four years, prices have risen at least 20 per cent, working hours have in many cases been lengthened and arbitrary decrees prevent employes from changing their jobs to seek better-paid positions except when authorized by the employment exchanges. While France was legislating a universal 40-hour week Germany decreed a 10-hour day in the building trade.

Nonetheless, grumbling over the unprecedented regimentation of labor is apparently not very serious. For one thing, it is balanced by equally rigid decrees limiting profits, disciplining employers and fixing prices and rents. For another, the Kraft durch Freude (Strength through enjoyment) movement is providing the workers with cheap or free amenities designed to offset the pinch of daily life.

The K. d. F., associated with the Arbeitsfront, is one of the many essentially communistic undertakings now apparent in Germany. It arranges opera and theater parties, sightseeing excursions, vacations at the seashore and in the mountains, even extended steamer cruises for deserving workers. It is said that more than 6,000,000 farm and factory employes received these privileges wholly or in large part at state expense last year. Of these, 150,000 were sent on cruises, to the Azores, the Baltic and the Norwegian fiords. A fleet of steamers, of which the first has been launched, is contemplated for the further development of this program.

No unemployment; no starvation and plenty of organized "enjoyment"—this is what the Nazi government, like that of Soviet Russia, offers the workers in exchange for the enforced surrender of their liberties. What it offers to employers, who are caught in a web of ever-tightening governmental decrees, is not so apparent. At present criticism is restrained by the current boom, reflected in numerous declarations of higher dividends. But this probably temporary situation does not console the German capitalist for restrictions on his liberty which by contrast make the most ardent New Dealers seem rugged individualists.

Under a decree of last December, for instance, owners of mining property must produce such quantities of coal or other minerals as the state orders. If they fail to do so within a given period another operator may be ordered to take over the property.

Directors of an industry basic to the development of synthetic products are told to build specified factories for that purpose, and must themselves raise the necessary capital to do so. The effect of arbitrary rulings on retail business are just as pronounced. A recent decree prohibits the use of leather for trunks, suitcases, handbags, camera cases and there is some apprehension that this may be extended to civilian footwear. In many other lines the shortage of raw materials, countered by sudden Draconian decrees, makes manufacturing, wholesaling and retailing an unprecedented gamble.

Yet the comments made in private by typical employers are not as bitter as one accustomed to hearing their American counterparts would expect. Partly that is because, as already indicated, there is no longer a labor problem in Germany. The manufacturer need not give a thought to strikes, to demands for wage increases or shorter hours, to any form of trade-union activity. There is nothing like that in Nazi Germany. Indeed the only labor difficulty is the present shortage of skilled workers, which the state proposes to meet by high-pressure training of apprentices.

It is in this balance of the sacrifices exacted from employers and employes that a large part of the strength of the Nazi regime undoubtedly rests. As long as the government cracks down with heavy-handed impartiality on both capitalist and worker neither is likely, assuming continued functioning of the economic machinery, to get beyond the grumbling stage. And it is on this that the Nazi leaders count heavily. It is on this basis that they build a propaganda which does not say, "Look what Hitler is doing for you," but which does say, "Look what Hitler's leadership is enabling you to do for yourselves."

As long as that outlook can be maintained, on a reasonably decent basis of living, the present regime in Germany will be secure. But from three directions there are evidences of undermining.

One of these is found in the increasing difficulties of daily life. Contrary to reports, the food shortage has never yet been really serious, except in certain items at certain times. But unless the slow yet steady decline in living standards can be checked, a dangerous accumulation of social discontent would seem inevitable. In the effort for self-sufficiency German capital, whether of raw material, food supplies or financial reserves, has been greatly depleted. How these can be restored under a policy of Autarky is not clear.

A second threat to the Nazi regime is found in the character of some of the Alte Kaempfer, gross and ignorant men maintained by Hitler in posts of command because of their assistance in bringing him to power. Of these Julius Streicher, Jew-baiting editor of the disgusting Stuermer, is only one of the more notorious. Men of this type have alienated not merely liberals but also many members of the Catholic and Evangelical churches. Some were removed by the "purge" of June 30, 1934. Quite enough to weaken the entire Nazi movement remain.

The third danger—or hope, according to viewpoint—is related to the second. Much of the muttering in Germany today focusses on the extravagances of some of the Nazi leaders, not Hitler, but his associates. There is criticism of the "palaces" they have bought and of the lavish style in which they live. People are wondering just how much of the public funds are caught by their stubby fingers. The contrast between the sacrifices asked by the Nazi chieftains and the sybaritic lives of some of them is frequently drawn. And now a rumor with circumstantial evidence behind it is beginning to circulate. It is charged that Goering and others of the inner circle are quietly expatriating personal funds to London.

Mutuality of sacrifice and complete faith in the leadership are the pillars which support the heavy keystone of Nazi domination. Even without a free press, rumors fly fast. If those now current in Germany continue to find eager ears, it will require more and more repression to preserve the regime.

Roosevelt, Jr., Bride-to-Be Skip Church

Go Motoring Instead; Ethel Sends Thanks for Presents.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Wilmington, Del., June 27.—Although the congregation expected them, Ethel duPont and her fiance, Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., did not attend services today at the small Christiana Hundred Church, where they will be married Wednesday. Instead, they went for a ride in young Roosevelt's roadster

The Rev. Frederick T. Ashton, pastor of the church, who will officiate at the wedding, made no reference in his sermon to the approaching nuptials.

Preparations for the event continued undiminished, however, with Miss duPont spending most of the day writing "thank you" notes, in an effort to have all gifts acknowledged before her honeymoon begins.

The young couple today exchanged their wedding gifts to each other. These were pieces of jewelry. Servants of the duPont household have banded together and presented them with an indirect lighting floor lamp, it was learned this afternoon.

It was also disclosed today that the "something old" which will be part of the bride's costume is a French antique prayer book, bound in carved ivory, which she will carry during the ceremony.

Col. Starling, head of the U. S. Secret Service, will arrive in Wilmington tomorrow to confer with C. C. Reynolds, superintendent of the Delaware State police on plans for arrival of President and his party for the wedding.

His assistance also will be given, it is thought, to the elaborate efforts being made to keep the honeymoon plans of the couple a secret. It is believed by many that they will make their "getaway" by air, using the private duPont airport, and they will sail for Europe the day following their marriage.

The dinner for the Fly Club, of Harvard, which is one of the outstanding prenuptial events, will be given in the billiard room on the third floor of the duPont home. It is believed that Miss duPont will entertain on the same night—Tuesday—for members of the bridal party.

Britain's Monarch Holds Review for 80,000 Ex-Soldiers

London, June 27 (AP).—Eighty thousand British veterans of the World War, 600 of them women and most of them gray-haired, marched past King George VI and Queen Elizabeth today in the largest parade ever held in Hyde Park.

King George in a brief speech reminded the veterans, Britain and Europe that "war is a great calamity for victors and vanquished alike. If we can convince the world of this fact, then I feel we can render no greater service to the human race," the King declared.

It required nearly two hours for the men and women to pass, although the veterans moved 20 abreast.

Officers of veterans' organizations indicated this might be the last great mass muster of those who fought for Britain in the World War.

Mrs. Kerngood's Body Discovered on Island

Baltimore, June 27 (AP).—A boy living on Gibson Island today found the body of Mrs. Allen H. Kerngood, Baltimore woman, who disappeared early yesterday from the bay steamer City of Norfolk en route to Baltimore from Norfolk.

The body washed ashore a few hundred yards from Mountain Bar Point, the southern end of the island. Mrs. Kerngood is survived by her husband, a daughter and a son.

Electric Rate in D. C. Lowest in Big Cities

The Federal Power Commission reported yesterday that Washington has the lowest basic residential electric rate in the country among cities over 100,000 in population.

Washington won out by 2 cents over its closest rival, Cleveland, Ohio, whose rate last year was $1 per 25 kilowatt hours, according to the commission's study of rate trends.

Social Security Board Set To Handle Workers' Accounts

Postoffice Turns Over Details of Vast Job on Thursday; Agency Is Clearing 80,000 Names Every Day.

Arrangements are complete for the Social Security Board to assume Thursday almost sole charge of perhaps the biggest administrative task the Government has undertaken. On that day the board will assign account numbers to workers. Until now the Postoffice Department has handled the job.

Scope of the task is indicated by the board's statement that such assignments are being made at the rate of 80,000 daily.

Postmasters will continue to give out application blanks together with information, but with that exception the board will have assumed virtually full charge of the work Thursday. The 147 field offices of the board are now prepared to function in the way originally planned.

"In announcing its plans for taking over the assignment of account numbers, the Social Security Board expressed its appreciation of the work done by the Postoffice Department," said a board statement. "Up to June 26 the Postoffice Department had assigned more than 29,000,000 account numbers, through 1,072 typing centers.

"The board explained that although the major part of the work of assigning account numbers to workers in covered employments is practically finished, it can never be considered entirely complete. It is probable that some workers now in covered employment may not yet have applied for numbers. Moreover, some 3,000,000 to 4,500,000 workers who enter covered employment this year may apply for account numbers. This group will include young people starting work for the first time and others who were not previously engaged in covered employment."

Flynn Forecasts G. O. P. Comeback

Camp Tamiment, Pa., June 27 (AP). John T. Flynn, economist and journalist, forecast today the election of a Republican President in 1940, and probably a Republican Congress.

"Don't take all this third term for Roosevelt talk too seriously, because there isn't going to be any," he told delegates to the Tamiment Economic and Social Institute.

Flynn also said another depression would engulf the country destroying faith in the present Administration.

Flynn said if the President succeeds "in packing the Supreme Court, he will accomplish nothing since Republicans will proceed to unpack it."

Capone's Conduct To Cut Sentence

By the United Press.

James V. Bennett, director of the Federal Bureau of Prisons, last night said Al Capone, one-time Chicago underworld king, could be released from Alcatraz in slightly more than a year, because of time off his full sentence for good behavior.

Bennett said that to the best of his recollections Capone had not lost any of his "good behavior time" and would be released a year from next fall. Capone was stabbed by another convict at Alcatraz, but apparently prison officials did not hold him responsible for this incident.

The director pointed out, however, that even when Capone is released from Alcatraz he will not win his immediate freedom, because he still has a sentence of one year in the Cook County Jail to serve.

U. S. Labor Act Change Urged By Vandenberg

Proposes Amendment to Give Employer Even Break in Law.

Practice Code" for labor including the following: (a) Prohibit compulsory political assessments upon union members; (b) require that all officers, agents and representatives of unions shall be citizens of the United States; (a) make it "unfair practice," subject to the regular penalties of the Wagner act, "to force any worker to join any labor organization by means of threats, intimidation, coercion or physical violence" or "to injure, damage or destroy the property of any person or to violate any person's rights in real or personal property" or "to strike for the purpose of coercing or forcing any person to violate any contract or the law of any State or of the United States."

Coercion of workers to make them join unions, damage to property, strikes intended to force any person to violate a contract or Federal laws, and violation of "any person's rights in real or personal property," also would be prohibited in the code.

"Moderate protections now may prevent radical restraints later," Vandenberg said.

He went on:

"I believe that it is only in some such fashion that a legitimate labor organizatoin can protect itself against excess from within and reprisals from without.

"There are four parties to a colletcive bargaining dispute under the Wagner act—the majority employes, the minority employes, the employer and the public.

"The Wagner act ably defends the first. It seems to me that it now must acknowledge the rights of the other three."

Another week-end labor development was a proposal by Representative Robert Ramspeck (Democrat), of Georgia, that the Wagner-Connery wages-and-hours bill be amended to make its terms inapplicable in cases where employers and employes have signed collective bargaining agreements. House and Senate labor committees are scheduled to start executive sessions on the bill today.

Family Service Camps Set Up Outside D. C.

Quarters to Be Opened Tomorrow, Wednesday for Underprivileged.

Departing from a custom of several years' duration, the summer outings committee of the Family Service Association will operate its summer camps for underprivileged mothers and children this season at a site outside the District of Columbia.

Camp Good Will, which is for white families, and Camp Pleasant, for colored families, will open tomorrow and Wednesday, respectively, at Camp Chopowamsic, Va. Their new quarters, which were rented from the National Park Service, are part of the model recreational facilities developed at Chopowamsic for the District.

The camps will continue through August and run in periods of two weeks each. They have a joint capacity of 225 mothers and children up to 12 years of age, and it is expected that more than 800 will be accommodated during the season.

For the first period the following agencies will send campers to one or both of the locations: Catholic Charities, Children's Hospital, Family Service Association, Georgetown Children's House, Juvenile Court, Juvenile Protective Association, Neighborhood House, Providence House and Public Assistance Division. Twenty-six agencies will have campers accommodated during the summer.

WPA Heads Worry Over 314,000 Cut

By the Associated Press.

WPA executives yearned yesterday for a sharp upturn in business to make easier their task of cutting some 314,000 workers off the rolls by July 15.

Harassed by complaints against dismissals, officials pointed out it is far easier to trim the rolls by taking advantage of a turnover—not replacing men who leave WPA for jobs in private industry.

WPA enrollment was just under 2,000,000 early this month and Administrator Harry L. Hopkins has said the number must be down to 1,660,000 July 15, because there will be less money available during the 1938 fiscal year.

After certain deductions have been made from the $1,500,000,000 voted for 1938 relief, WPA will have about $1,325,000,000 for the year. This compares with $1,850,000,000 spent in 1937.

Observers noted that the cries against WPA curtailment, which may have helped President Roosevelt and Hopkins to defeat efforts to cut the appropriation, now have become a worry for the WPA itself.

The Arts Project employes, officials said, are the chief complainers, "partly because they have a pretty good case and partly because they are the most articulate group."

Most of Md. Fatalities Occur In Good Autos on Clear Days

Weather Bright in 23 of 35 May Cases; 36 of 46 Vehicles Reported Without Mechanical Defects; Only 7 Drivers Drinking.

If the weather is clear, the road straight, your brakes good and you're cold sober, watch out! More than likely you'll have an accident.

At least, this would be the natural deduction from the report of accident fatalities for last month published by the Maryland State commissioner of motor vehicles.

There were 35 fatal automobile accidents in Maryland during May, the report reveals.

In 23 of the cases, the weather was clear, in 10 it was raining and in 2 it was cloudy. Furthermore, 18 of the fatalities occurred in the daytime and 17 at night.

Sixteen out of the 35 fatalities occurred on straight stretches of road. Only six happened on curves, eight at intersections and five between intersections.

According to the statistics, not a single fatality was due to defective brakes. Improper lights and defective steering mechanism likewise caused no accidents.

Paradoxically, the report discloses, 36 of the 46 vehicles involved in the 35 fatal accidents had no mechanical defects.

The report reveals that out of the 46 drivers only 7 had been drinking. And 34 of the drivers were listed as "normal," without even any physical defects, such as bad eyesight, or poor hearing.

Other facts revealed by the report were: (1) most of the fatal crashes occurred on Thursday, not on Saturday night, as might be expected; (2) not a single taxi driver was involved in the accidents; (3) only one woman driver was involved; (4) most of the drivers ranged in age from 20 to 29; (5) exactly half of the drivers had more than five years' driving experience; (6) only three drivers with less than a year's experience were involved, and (7) not one of the drivers was held for manslaughter.

C. I. O. to Organize State Employes

The C. I. O. is preparing to form a union of State, county and municipal employes, labor leaders said yesterday.

A. D. Lewis, younger brother of the C. I. O. chief, John L. Lewis, has been entrusted with the job of setting up the new union.

The latest official estimate is that there were 1,789,000 State, county and municipal employes in 1934. This figure does not include teachers and other educational workers.

The C. I. O. has already begun to organize Federal workers into the United Federal Workers of America. Set up under Jacob Baker, one-time Wyoming cowboy and until last week a Works Progress Administration executive, the Federal Union claimed an initial membership of 4,300. It was organized from groups which split away from the American Federation of Government Employes, an American Federation of Labor Union.

Product Of Desperation.

When citizens of a community begin asking for a sales tax, it is a certain sign that the situation confronting them is desperate. And that word aptly describes Washington today. The Federation of Citizens Associations and the Merchants and Manufacturers Association have now both gone on record in favor of a 2 per cent levy on all transactions except those involving food, medicines and the cheaper grades of clothing.

The cause of their despair is well known. Congress has ignored the law requiring the Federal Government to contribute 40 per cent of the National Capital's upkeep. As a result, the District of Columbia faces a deficit of more than $6,000,000. To meet it, various devices have been proposed, chief among them being a tax on incomes. But because their own salaries would be liable to such a levy, members of Congress have voted this down. As a substitute, an increased real estate tax has been proposed. But here the citizens of Washington object. Federal property which comprises 40 per cent of the District, is exempt from taxation. This means that most of the burden of making up the deficit will be thrown on the citizens who own only 60 per cent of the city's real property. To make it worse, Washington real estate taxes are already high.

Thus, citizens are now indorsing an alternative sales tax proposal. In so doing, they are no doubt well aware that such a tax invariably weighs more heavily on the poor than on the rich. From a social viewpoint, this makes it anything but desirable. Nonetheless, the citizens see no choice in the matter. To such extremes has Congress, through its inexcusable bungling, driven the City of Washington.

New Strike Technique.

The men and women employed on WPA arts projects in New York City show none of that shy shrinking from rude combat that is supposed to be characteristic of the artistic temperament. On the contrary, musicians, writers and painters on the WPA pay rolls have developed a strike technique that is a tribute to their superior inventiveness.

"Sit-ins" and "sit-downs," of course, are too common to attract much attention today. A current WPA hunger strike in New York adds a touch of variety to the picture. But the outstanding departure from the familiar modes of procedure came last week when relief workers invaded the office of the New York arts project with the purpose of holding the executive head a prisoner until notices of dismissal were canceled.

The fact that these orders were made necessary by the reduction of the Federal relief appropriation and could not be rescinded by the hapless hostage shows how little attention people pay to rational explanations when faced by loss of jobs. It further shows how difficult it is to reverse a policy that has encouraged recipients of relief to believe that the Federal Government owes every man a living.

No doubt the WPA artists have among them writers with an imaginative grasp of gangster methods which they desired to put to practical use. By making a captive of a superior and forcing him to transmit their messages to Washington, they have taken first place among the inventors of new strike technique. It would be rather ironical, however, if the Federal relief program should be credited with encouraging a new kind of employer kidnaping, with ransom demands expressed in terms of higher wages, shorter hours and more jobs.

Gluttons For Spoils.

Congress has been letting its taste for patronage run riot at this session. A prime example of its gluttony is found in the bill which will extend the life of the Civilian Conservation Corps. Although the Senate had originally stipulated that all CCC employes, except those connected with the Army, should be put under the merit system, the act as delivered to the White House last week lacked this important provision. This, it is commonly agreed, constitutes one of the greatest blows handed civil service reform advocates this year.

Last summer officials of both the Departments of Agriculture and Interior testified that from 20 to 25 per cent of the non-technical foremen in the corps owed their employment to political pull. And, if the testimony of the New Jersey State forester can be taken as typical, this was a considerable understatement. According to his word, no man was considered for a foreman's job in the CCC unless his name appeared on "Jim Farley's list." If Congress has its way, this flagrant abuse of a useful organization will continue under the CCC's new lease on life.

On Capitol Hill the love of easy patronage obviously takes precedence over any concern for a systematic solution of the unemployment problem. But the President still has authority to save the CCC from the spoilsmen. This negligence on the part of Congress will put to a severe test the President's recent decision that all except policy-forming positions in the Government should be subjected to the merit system.

Out In The Open.

"Italy," says Il Popolo d' Italia, Mussolini's personal organ, "has not been neutral in this conflict (the Spanish civil war) but has fought and victory, therefore, will be hers."

"Germany needs Spanish ore," said Hitler, "and that is why we want a Nationalist Spain."

Coming hard on the heels of Italy's and Germany's withdrawal from the international sea patrol, this frankness is as illuminating as it is ominous. On the one hand, it gives substance to the mounting suspicion that the Fascist powers are now preparing to intervene openly on the side of the Spanish insurgents and against the Valencia government. On the other hand, it constitutes an admission that Italy and Germany have definitely been violating both the spirit and the letter of the nonintervention agreement to which they are a party.

As a matter of fact, it was a very thin veil covering the truth which Duce and Fuehrer now have boldly stripped aside. It has been no secret that over a period of many months men and supplies have been furnished Gen. Franco by the Fascist powers. Hitherto, however, these governments have taken the stand that the soldiers in question were simply "volunteers" and the supplies those which the Spanish rebels had received before the nonintervention agreement came into force.

These pretenses are now being dropped. Mussolini's statement makes clear what has been suspected from the beginning, that neither Germany nor Italy is in the slightest interested in isolating the Spanish struggle and thus permitting the raging fires in the Iberian Peninsula to burn themselves out. Whatever action they may take in the future will be by Italy's own admission, with the single eye to making certain a rebel victory.

So long as it was to their advantage to pretend adherence to the nonintervention pact or to participate in the naval patrol scheme, the Fascist powers did so, though with tongue in cheek. But under no circumstances have they been willing to preserve a truly neutral attitude although more than eager to have France and Great Britain pursue such a course since that worked to the disadvantage of the regularly constituted Spanish government. Now their unneutrality, encouraged by the victory at Bilbao and the preoccupation of the democratic powers and Russia with other problems, is coming out into the open.

Under the circumstances, it is not a little startling, therefore, to discover that Great Britain is continuing to urge the Fascist powers to resume their places on the naval patrol and that the argument which, according to dispatches from London, is being advanced in the present negotiations with Berlin and Rome, is that a purely Anglo-French naval patrol would benefit the Valencia government.

This happens to be a fact. True nonintervention, now as in the past, would unquestionably benefit the loyalists and place the insurgents at a real disadvantage since they are more dependent on outside aid. But it throws a curiously disturbing light on Britain's own attitude in the Spanish civil war to have this argument employed as a lever to bring Germany and Italy back into line.

Air Transport Regulation.

Aviation interests throughout the country are anxiously awaiting a vote on the McCarran-Lea bill. That measure would place the economic regulation of the air transport business under the jurisdiction of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Principal opposition to the bill comes from the Postoffice Department which has virtual control over commercial air lines at present. It predicts a considerable increase in air mail costs, if the bill is passed, and fears air routes may be changed without reference to mail delivery needs. Apparently these criticisms are based on a strained interpretation of the measure. The demonstrated integrity of the I. C. C. insures against any orders that would impede efficient mail delivery or in any other way detract from the public service of the air lines. The I. C. C. itself approves the McCarran-Lea proposal, suggesting only a few minor revisions in it.

Aside from safety requirements, which under the new bill would continue to be administered by the Bureau of Air Commerce, the only air lines subject to Government control are those which carry mail. Any one with a few thousand dollars can organize an air line and compete with an existing company unhampered by rules and regulations. Moreover, the existing lines are prevented from meeting such devastating competition by extending their operations into untapped fields. Only the Postoffice Department can authorize an expansion of schedules and since 1933 no such authorization has been given, though more than one application has been made.

Under the proposed bill, the I. C. C. would take over the responsibility for appraising the demand for air services and issuing certificates of convenience and necessity to every air line. Moreover, the commission would control all rates and would have jurisdiction in all questions of mergers, accounting methods, trade agreements and unfair practices. In short, the McCarran-Lea bill would put air transportation under regulations similar to those imposed—all too belatedly—on railroad and motor lines.

The day is drawing to a close when aviation needs postoffice subsidies to exist. It is fast approaching the point where it must be considered as an integral part of the national transportation system. As such it should properly be placed under the direction of the agency most competent to promote the interests of both the public and the aviation industry, namely, the I. C. C.

The Tax Expert Problem.

As Senator La Follette says, the exodus of tax experts from the Bureau of Internal Revenue for the purpose of "cashing in" on their inside knowledge of our revenue system is one of the "real problems in the struggle of the Government to collect its taxes." Quite a number of former bureau employes have made fortunes advising clients how they may safely escape payment of income taxes by taking advantage of technicalities and loopholes in the law. Publishing the names of these men might throw some light on the extent of the evil. But like sporadic and partial exposure of individuals who have avoided payment of taxes, it would not provide a remedy for present abuses.

Unpleasant publicity may check certain patent effects at tax avoidance that verge on the fraudulent and may cause the experts to be more cautious in giving advice. The source of the Treasury's difficulties, however, is found in our complex, inequitable and oppressive form of income taxation which offers innumerable opportunities for sharp practices.

Of course, this weakness explains the thriving business done by the expert adviser whose activities are extremely difficult to control. There is no really practicable way of preventing a former Government employe from utilizing knowledge gained in public service, although he may be prohibited from making direct contacts with Government agencies.

Fortunately, the current investigation of tax-dodging devices is emphasizing the need for basic reform of the existing income tax system, including methods of administering tax laws. The task of closing loopholes is especially difficult because of the law's complexities. Commissioner Helvering has pointed out, for instance, that creation of a personal holding company as a means of tax avoidance "shades by imperceptible degrees from the use of companies having a substantial separate existence to mere shams."

Legislative processes are too slow and cumbersome to provide that constant revision and clarification which the Commissioner of Internal Revenue considers essential to cope with the "litigious taxpayer and quack tax avoidance experts. A large amount of discretionary power to interpret the law has to be vested in the Government's own experts if tax-dodgers are to be dealt with promptly and effectively. Yet the public naturally objects to lodging such power in the hands of Government employes often more interested in making useful outside contacts than in faithfully discharging their immediate duties. Moreover, the practice of utilizing the Government service as a stepping stone to something more desirable means a loss of the best men when they have about reached the peak of efficiency.

The problem is one that concerns all branches of the Federal service, not merely the Bureau of Internal Revenue. What we need is to build up a career service that will attract and hold honest capable individuals who can be trusted to exercise discretion in dealing with the public. Under present conditions, the rewards offered the rank and file are not commensurate with the work and responsibility required, while most of the top positions are political spoils. These fundamental weaknesses of the civil service combined with the inadequacies of the law are the primary reasons why tax evasion and avoidance flourish in our midst.

The attitude of the rising generation seems to be that nothing is a sin unless you're ashamed of it. (P. S.—There aren't many things they're ashamed of.)

Louisiana Lobby.

From the Brooklyn Daily Eagle.

With appalling candor, the State of Louisiana—which means the Louisiana Long machine—opens an "embassy" in Washington, equipped with much elegant furniture, a public relations agent and, no doubt, a charge account at the nearest liquor store.

There was a time when a State had reason to consider its two Senators and its elected Representatives enough of a "lobby" to see that the interests of the State were guarded. But, as Miss Dorothy Thompson, of the New York Herald Tribune, has pointed out, the Long machine has instituted in Louisiana the nearest thing to fascism that can be found in this country, and the usual Democratic processes by which the people of a State find representation at the National Capitol are, of course, insufficient in the eyes of hillbilly Hitlers.

Since the death of Long removed that gentleman permanently from politics, the national Democratic machine has been able to close its eyes to the fact that Long or no Long the Louisiana machine continues to grind on.

The Sun Replies.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In The Post of June 23 Samuel Lipkowitz says that the Sun's article on the Herrin massacre "fails to cite certain facts which have an important bearing on the whole affair, namely, that the mine operator failed to abide by an agreement not to produce coal for sale, merely to clear the ground for strip mining." This was stated, at least by implication, for the Sun article said that the workers who afterward were murdered "met no interference while they stripped the mine of earth without removing coal."

Mr. Lipkowitz also accuses the Sun of failing to say that "union operators were discharged by the management." As John L. Lewis called out all the union miners 82 days before the massacre, how could they have been discharged?

Mr. Lipkowitz says that the report of the United States Coal Commission "does not place the blame for the affair on the shoulders of John L. Lewis." The Sun article printed Mr. Lewis' telegram to the Illinois local union, which said that the workmen were to be viewed in the same light as "any other common strike breaker."

Mr. Lipkowitz ignores the crux of the whole tragedy—that the workers (strike breakers, if he will) surrendered under promise of safe conduct and were deliberately butchered. Let him read, as well as the ridiculous verdict of the coroner's jury, the report of the Special Grand Jury impanelled to investigate the horror.

The Underprivileged.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The President's determination to remove poverty from the lives of one-third of the population of the country that are "ill-fed, ill-clad, ill-housed," usually referred to as our "underprivileged," is commendable, even though conflicting with an authority still quite respectable through the vista of 19 centuries—"the poor ye have always with you."

"Underprivileged" seems to be not the word under which to blanket the segment of our citizenship that fails to make a reasonable success of life, implying that privileges enjoyed by the larger segment have been withheld by society from the rest. When a young man, the "privileges" that enabled me to install my bride in our own vine-covered cottage—industry and frugality—had not been denied my brother, who was forced to house his bride in a rented flat because he had disdained his "privileges" and did to the end of his life, remaining always a floater.

Let us not weaken our compassion for and ministrations to the poor, nor lessen our efforts to eradicate, root and branch, every vestige of unjustice from our industrial system. At the same time let us get things straight; let us brush the gossamer web of tears from our eyes that we may view more clearly the problem as it is.

Who are the insecure of our population, not just now in a time of depression, but perenially? Whether it is one-third or not, nobody knows; but it is, regrettably, large enough at all times. Many of course are the targets of cruel misfortune, others the victims of ruthless injustice, but largely they are sub-standard individuals, inefficient, congenitally or voluntarily, and of little use to society. If the human race were, universally, able and willing to create the measure of abundance that each individual covets, it is conceivable that poverty would disappear from human society, because abundance for all is possible. The difficulty lies in the fact that "abundance" in America is raw material, not ready-to-eat manna from Heaven; nor is it a "voluntary," like bananas and cocoanuts in the tropics. It must be manufactured by somebody's toil of brawn and brain.

DuPont Gained?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I was delighted to note in The Post of June 25 that so many of the duPonts are leaving for Europe before the wedding of Miss Ethel to Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr. It seems to me a very auspicious omen signifying that we of the New Deal have gained a duPont rather than lost a Roosevelt.

If that is true, we welcome her most cordially into our midst and hope that she will try to do what she can to make America a safer and happier place for all. May her relatives return from Europe with broader vision and deeper understanding of the necessity of adjusting themselves to the next stage in our economic evolution!

Advice To Industrialists.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The proper way to deal with the C. I. O. is to treat them as "Reds." Industrial concerns should organize against them. When they muster strength enough to call a strike, the plant in which it is called should be closed and left closed until they are starved into submission. Of course, it may seem that the industries will be hurting themselves as well as the strikers. But they can afford it. And they won't have to resort to it often. Because one or two such experiences and the "back to work" movement will become so strong that a C. I. O. organizer won't dare to appear on the streets.

Industry, not hobos, must keep the whip hand. Workmen are wholly dependent upon industry and can exist only a short time without it. Hence the above as the only lasting remedy should be obvious to all industrial concerns. When their employes strike and refuse to let others work, let industrial magnates close up shop and take a trip around the world. It will do them good, and when they return their labor troubles will be over. Because even a Communistic-minded Administration cannot help strikers long when the majority of the public does not approve.

Railroad Labor's Example.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I read with much interest your editorial of June 23 regarding collective bargaining. It brought to mind the splendid spirit of co-operation as recently shown at the railway pension conference by the railroad managements and the railroad brotherhoods in getting together and peacefully working out their differences for their mutual benefit.

This is a fine example of what really can be accomplished, for the good of all concerned, through the medium of collective bargaining; and, without resorting to the brutal, un-American tactics as employed by other industries and so-called labor organizations, who, through the havoc they wreak upon themselves, their families and their community, must, inevitably lose more than they can ever hope to gain.

The railroad employes of this country have just reason to be proud of their splendid labor organization, which follows the principle of reason rather than of violence.

On Jaywalking.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Senate District Committee, as reported in The Post, has found that the high percentage of automobile accidents involving pedestrians is due to the latter being usually at fault. After three years' residence here, I have noticed that not only do all drivers flagrantly disregard traffic laws—and get away with it—but that most pedestrians take more chances than they ought to, resulting in terrific loss of limb and life each year in the District.

Some time ago, while visiting San Francisco, the writer attempted to jaywalk across Market street. Suddenly a police whistle sounded, then a good-natured officer gruffly shouted, "You'll have to cross at the intersection!" As he informed me I'd get a ticket just like any other traffic offender, the jaywalking public thinks twice.

If Washington had such regulations, too; if there were fewer taxicabs on the streets; if drivers would observe road rules; especially the tendency to try to beat the red signals; finally, if the Capital's police force were adequate to the magnitude of our traffic problem, many pedestrians might not spend so much time in hospitals or go to premature graves.

Not 'Lon' But 'Lan.'

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: For the sake of pronunciation, may I refer William Lyons Phelps to the famous "Larousse?"

In his article about the French town Laon he pronounces "lon." It should be "lan," as in paon (peacock) or taon (horsefly). Thus will be avoided little mistakes in language like the too famous made-up "demi-tasse" or "encore."

93 Trusts Of The 1900-14 Era.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In your issue of June 17, you quote Senator O'Mahoney as saying in an address to the graduates of the Catholic University: "We talk much these days of staggering Government expenditures and of the heavy burden of taxation. All of the taxes collected by all of the many public taxing agencies are but a drop in the bucket compared to the tribute that has been and is being wrung from the consuming masses of the Nation by these corporate states which fix the prices of the necessities of life."

On the same date an Associated Press dispatch carries the following paragraph regarding a two-year survey made by the Twentieth Century Fund:

"The trustees gave a free hand to the projects research economists, who began the business profits study with an inquiry into 93 'trusts' representative of the 1900-1914 area. They found the common stocks of the 93 averaged only 4.3 per cent up to 1914; 24 of the 93 paid no dividends at all; only 16 paid as much as 7 per cent, and only 22 paid as much as could have been obtained from industrial bonds at the time—5 per cent."

Continuing the quotation from the dispatch:

"Even during the heyday of the trusts in the early 1900's, the report says, big corporations did not live up to their reputations of infallibly piling up vast returns at lightning speed.

"Some trusts did make 'exceptionally' rich profits, the study showed, but 'the majority' of 93 corporations—formed before 1904, each with $10,000,000 or more capital, were 'not * * * profitable for investors in their common stocks' over a ten-year period.'

"The bigger the business, the report said, the smaller the proportionate amou[illegible] or deficit."

To reconcile the statement[illegible] these [illegible]o sources is difficu[illegible] The one source is a United States Senator speaking before a group of young men and women who, presumably, look up to him for guidance. The other is a group of economists who were given "a free hand" to ascertain the facts of the case.

Under the cirumstances it would appear that Senator O'Mahoney is under the greater responsibility of keeping to the f[illegible] for he is attempting to mold the convictions of others. The situation at least seems to demand some explanation on the part of Senator O'Mahoney. What are the facts upon which he bases his assertions? If his statement cannot be substantiated by the facts, does he not owe it to the young people whom he addressed to correct it?

Here Are Amateurs

CREWS representing seven American universities met on the Hudson in the annual intercollegiate regatta at Poughkeepsie last Tuesday. There were races for freshmen eight-oar crews, for junior varsity outfits and finally the four-mile grind for the varsity oarsmen. The University of Washington made rowing history by taking all three races for the second year in succession, and incidentally established new course records in all three events. The radio carried the event to millions of Americans, and the affair seems to grow in interest from year to year, even among those of us who never saw an eight-oared racing shell outside motion pictures.

The explanation of this increase in public favor for rowing is likely found in the fact that these boys are genuine amateurs, bona fide exponents and practitioners of sport for sport's sake. These crews at Poughkeepsie had been in the severest sort of training for at least nine months, and probably none of them indulged in competition more than three times during the season. Washington's victorious outfit had competed against California only before it added to its laurels in Poughkeepsie.

The oarsmen rarely ever get their names into the paper, much less into the headlines, and by and large the only reasonable explanation of their rowing is that they love it. A public that is becoming more and more fed up on amateurism in name only naturally turns with a feeling of relief and refreshment to youngsters who play for the sake of play.

"Amateur" tennis players, as everyone knows, can and do make a very nice living by accepting "expenses" from tournament to tournament and from continent to continent. There is nothing particularly wrong about it, of course, but is an old custom that is deceptive and anomalous to some extent. The trend is probably somewhat away from the maintenance of the fiction, at that, and the game will doubtless be the better for it when the movement has been carried to its logical conclusion. There is no harm in playing tennis for a living, after all, especially in a country where the term "professional" carries no social stigma, and the game could be divided into classes that allowed tennis for the sake of the game purely, and tennis where gate receipts are admitted openly to be the consideration they already are in fact.

Tennis is merely an example, at that, for the powers that be in many sports beat the devil around the stump in so many peculiar ways that "amateur" has come to be a word all but impossible to define. We repeat there is no crime involved, and our only thought is that the games would have more sincere appeal to the public and would stand on a far firmer basis if the present hocus-pocus were abandoned. Much of what goes on is in the same class with pretending that heavyweight wrestling is a contest rather than an exhibition. In any event, though, college oarsmen are amateurs of purest ray serene, and more power to them.

Civil War Wounds.

After more than three-quarters of a century, the last remnants of the thin gray line which fought under Lee and his generals will bivouac next year with their former foes in blue, the men of Grant and the other Union leaders. The scene of the historic meeting is to be at Gettysburg, where the greatest battle between the two heroic hosts was fought.

For several years the question of a joint meeting with the G. A. R. has been debated by the United Confederate Veterans. This year, at the assurance that their flag would be carried in honor in the parade, and that their shrill rebel yell should ring as loudly as the cheers of the Northerners, the Southern organization voted to accept the invitation of their enemies of long ago. Even now a minority seems to be holding back in the old spirit of bitterness. But that is not the spirit that actuated the vote for a joint reunion.

Literally the decision may not be of great importance. It simply means that two groups of aged men will meet, live over the gallant days of their youth, parade and revisit historic scenes. But in a symbolic sense its importance can scarcely be exaggerated

The old resentments which once tore this Nation in two have died or have ceased to mean anything. Aged Yanks and Johnny Rebs now live in peace and fraternity with one another. The fact that they can camp on the same battlefield in friendly comradeship and discuss the great past without rancor is the final proof that time has healed the wounds of the Civil War. And so the whole Nation, North and South, applauds the decision of the grayed sons of Dixie. May the reunions of the veterans of 1861, blue and gray, continue for many years to come!

On the Road

By Tom McCarthy

Tom McCarthy, conductor of The Washington Post's radio programs over Station WMAL, left the Nation's Capital a few days ago for California . . . on foot, on his own. As a vagabond reporter, he will visit the small towns and large cities between here and the Pacific Coast, writing his impressions, from day to day, on the way. The first of a series of articles that will appear in The Washington Post, daily and Sunday, appears below. Westbrook Pegler's column will not appear for several weeks while that writer enjoys his annual vacation.

Grand Adventure Starts.

A FEW NIGHTS AGO, looking like a cross between a Boy Scout and a CCC worker, I plunged into the wilderness of Wisconsin avenue and started, with a pack on my back and a few dollars in my pocket, for the sunny State of California.

TOM McCARTHY.

As I walked along I listened expectantly for the cry of some policeman with a sense of humor and a bit of curiosity. I could hear him shouting in withering glee, "Hey sonny, where you goin'?"

I had my reply to the imaginary question all figured out. With dignity and reserve I would answer, "San Francisco." That should hold him, I thought. But then if he followed the matter up and said, "Where are you from?" I would have to answer, "Well, you see, I'm just starting out. I live here."

It was really a fine morning, walking was easy, and it wasn't long before I found myself across the Fourteenth street bridge, standing on the truck route into Alexandria. That was mistake No. 1. In the first place, after standing there fruitlessly for some two hours, I came to the conclusion that truck drivers at that hour in the morning aren't interested in hitch-hikers. Discovery No. 2 was, that I had chosen the wrong highway in the first place. What I wanted was the Lee highway out of Rosslyn.

* * * *

My first thought was to hail one of the cabs at the airport and have myself driven over to Rosslyn. After wrestling with that temptation and concluding that such a course wouldn't be exactly "cricket" I set out on foot for Rosslyn. As I walked along I heard somebody hurrying along behind me.

I turned my head and was greeted with a "Mornin' brother," by a definitely dirty looking, but otherwise indefinite tramp. He walked along beside me, asking me if I'd come far. I vaguely referred to a trip from down the line. After a few moments of silence he came to business.

"Say, could you let me have something for a cup of coffee?"

And I had thought, rather pridefully, that he had accepted me as one of his own! He got the money, and I got a nod and a wave as he set off down the road. The most unkind cut of all was his "thank you, sir." I kicked myself most of the way into Rosslyn. I was some tramp.

It was at Falls Church that I received my second ride of the morning. My driver was a stern-faced man of middle age. As we rode along he cast anxious glances away from the road, scanning my face.

Finally he said, "It's mighty dangerous business picking up people these days."

"Yes," I replied brightly, "the papers are full of the crimes some of these hitch-hikers have committed." I added, "I think its awful."

There was an awkward silence, so I asked him what he thought of the Administration, which seemed at the moment a much safer topic of conversation.

* * * *

He said he liked Mr. Roosevelt, but thought it was time for him to do something about "those strikes." He didn't seem to be very much interested in politics. Suddenly, he said, "How far are you going?"

"I'd like to get down toward Roanoke today," I told him.

Alternate snatches of aimless conversation and disturbing silence filled the ride down the road into Orange County, Va. Finally, as we drove into the little town of Orange, he stopped the car and burst out with, "You don't carry a gun, do you?"

"Why, of course not!" I laughed, but it sounded a little strained, even to me.

"Now look here, young man," he said, "you've been mighty, mighty evasive in some of your answers to my questions. I'm going all the way into Roanoke, after I stop off here for an hour, but I won't carry you till I make sure that you're not armed."

Before I started the trip I had made up my mind not to identify myself as a reporter unless absolutely necessary, but at the moment that ride down to Roanoke looked too good to pass up.

"I'm not carrying any weapons, I said; "that bulge in my back pocket is a camera. Let me identify myself." I gave him a letter and driver's license.

"Why, I always did want to know a newspaperman," he said. "I'll be glad to have you along."

While waiting for my driver to conduct his business in Orange I lounged in front of the courthouse, with some of the town's professional plain and fancy loungers. I could hear whispered consulations about the pack I was carrying and my general get-up. Even these, however, were insufficient to disturb my general tranquillity. I was under way. I had the promise of a ride all the way into Roanoke, and the day was warm and pleasant.

Suddenly the voice of the law shattered the quiet of the morning. A policeman stood in front of the courthouse and shouted, "Hey, Judge!" I looked around but saw no sign of life from the courthouse. Suddenly, a head popped out of a window, over a store opposite the courthouse.

"What is it, Tracy?" said the head, while the attention of Main street riveted on this cross-street conversation.

"I've got a prisoner, Judge," said the law, pointing to a colored boy resting under a tree on the courthouse lawn.

"Bring him up in about ten minutes," said the head.

"The judge'll see you in about ten minutes," said the law.

"Okay," said the colored boy under the tree, and Main street and the courthouse lawn, momentarily electrified, went back to passing the time of day.

I guess it wasn't anything very serious anyhow, because I saw the colored boy sauntering along unperturbed a half an hour later.

The Tennis Matches

By

William Lyon Phelps

At Forest Hills.

This year I had the good fortune to witness all five tennis matches between the United States and Australia, at Forest Hills. It was unfortunate both for the Australians and for the thousands of spectators that Mr. Quist was so ill he could not appear and that Mr. McGrath (pronounced McGraw) could play only in the doubles, where he was positively brilliant.

It has been suggested (not by the Australians) that when serious sickness attacks one of the players, the matches be postponed; but I believe such a thing, however desirable, would be impossible. The difference between training for a contest and training for life is that the date of the test is known and one must either play or default; in life the date of a supreme crisis is usually not known and may descend upon us like a thief in the night. For that, also, there is no postponement.

* * * *

The weather was perfect for all these contests; and several facts became clear. Budge is undoubtedly a great player, the first and only one America has had since Vines became a professional; and Budge is more dependable than Vines, for while Vines could beat any tennis player in the world when he was at his best, he could also be (and was) beaten by players two classes below him. Grant is fully worthy of his place on the team and is a difficult assignment for any opponent. He has enormous courage and endurance, and, being built so close to the ground, he lifts those flat drives off the turf with apparent ease. Mako is a very good but not a great doubles player.

* * * *

Fulpan Rejects High Court Offer

Petunia Congressman Boomed For Post By Wobbel.

By Louis M. Jiggitts,

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Petunia,
May 17, 1937.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Washington, D. C.

Dear Congressman Fulpan:

I have been thinking about you sitting on the Supreme Court, and I believe you are the man for the place. I have talked to a number of your friends here and they all think you ought to have it, and besides it would be a great honor for Verbena County.

What is the matter with this idea?

Yours, very truly,
WILL WOBBEL.

Washington, D. C.,
May 19, 1937.

Mr. Will Wobbel,
Petunia.

My dear Mr. Wobbel:

The Congressman is busy with committee work this morning and has made an engagement to have his doodle analyzed again this afternoon, but I am sure that he will be glad to explain what is the matter with your idea as soon as he returns to the office.

Assuring you that the Congressman is always delighted to hear from one of his constituents, I am

Yours sincerely,
WILLA DOOLITTLE,
Secretary.

Petunia,
May 22, 1937.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Washington, D. C.

Dear Congressman Fulpan:

We have already started a movement for you and feel that you should take it. Nearly everybody here is for you, except a few who are always against everything anyhow. Miss Prissie Prince and Miss Primrose Potts have already started to circulate a petition among the ladies for you, and Mrs. Fannie Sitz said she is creating a poem for the Verbena County Weekly Bugle and Gazette. Even Hezekiah Hawks, who doesn't seem to like you, said he would organize Detour. He said he'd be glad to do anything to get you out of the district even if it meant sitting you on the Supreme Court.

Miss Potts said she felt like it was just your modesty that made you hesitate about the appointment, as you always avoid publicity and there has been a good deal in the papers about the court lately, but that we must not let your modesty affect the country's welfare.

I hope your doodle is better. What is it?

Please let me hear by return letter that you will be Supreme Court judge.

Yours very truly,
WILL WOBBEL.

P. S.—I see from the papers that Congressman Wearin and Congressman Mouton are going to have a pig-calling contest and one of them is going to holler in French. Do they have any French pigs in Washington?

Washington, D.C.
May 25, 1937.

Mr. Will Wobbel,
Petunia.

My dear Mr. Wobbel:

I regret that the Congressman is still busy with important committee work, but I can assure you that he is well qualified for the Supreme Court judgeship, and I know that he would be anxious to honor Verbena County. However, I do not believe that he can accept the place under present circumstances.

A doodle is a drawing you make with your unconscious mind.

Assuring you that he appreciates the kind expressions contained in your letter, I am,

Yours, sincerely,
WILLA DOOLITTLE,
Secretary.

P. S.—There are no French pigs in Washington.

Petunia,
May 27, 1937.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Washington, D. C.

Dear Congressman Fulpan:

The movement of Fulpan for Supreme Court is growing all over this section of the country. Today Mrs. Fannie Sitz's poem was published, which she called a modest little quadrant in honor of a wonderful man and here it is:

Whatever becomes of the Supreme Court plan
There is a great man who will and can
Interpret the law like no other man
The able, courageous and fearless Fulpan.

The title is "Cicero Fulpan, Justiciary Superb."

At a meeting of your friends in the schoolhouse yesterday Judge Wooster, our Justice of the Peace, said that he remembered when you practiced before him a good while before the war and that you were the most original lawyer he ever heard argue. He said that the record shows you lost all your cases but that it was not your fault, as you were just on the wrong side in both of them.

CICERO FULPAN, M. C.

People are beginning to call you "Justice" Fulpan. How many opponents do you have?

I am sorry that you are so busy with committee work and doodling. What committees do you belong to, and do you doodle often?

Yours very truly,
WILL WOBBEL.

P. S. Do you mean that the pigs understand French and English both?

Washington, D. C.,
May 29, 1937.

My dear Mr. Wobbel:
Petunia.

My dear Mr. Wobbell:

I regret again that the Congressman's many duties prevent his answering your communication. This morning he advised a number of leaders about Government finances and he attended a luncheon with other leaders at noon to discuss when to adjourn Congress which lasted until late afternoon.

He is deeply grateful for your kind remarks and those of his many friends in Petunia, but he has made it a rule to sacrifice his own interests to the welfare of his country. He feels that in such times as these his constituents need his services more in Congress, where he is a recognized leader. In fact some of his friends here have reminded him that it would be difficult to fill his shoes in the House.

Several parties have been mentioned for the place besides Congressman Fulpan, but the Congressman has not definitely decided to whom he will throw his support.

The Congressman does not belong to any committees as he cannot limit himself. Because of his long experience he is constantly called upon to advise all the important committees.

The Congressman is generally considered the best doodler in Congress, including the Senate.

Yours sincerely,
WILLA DOOLITTLE,
Secretary.

P. S. There are no pigs at all in Washington. The nearest pigs are on farms in Virginia and Maryland.

Petunia, June 1, 1937.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Washington, D. C.

Dear Congressman Fulpan:

Since you have all that much work to do it looks like you would be glad to make a change.

I was talking to Ben Bumper about the luncheon at which you ate all afternoon and he said it reminded him of the time you ate at his house last year during the campaign and got slightly sick. He said he thought it was a fine compliment to Mrs. Bumper's cooking for you to eat so much, but since I told him about your lunch in Washington, he guessed it was just a habit. Yours very tmruly,

WILL WOBBEL.

P. S.—Those fellows must be champions alright if they expect to call pigs all the way from Virginia. Slim Slack's record at the Verbena County Fair was just 2 miles on a clear day and then only one pig paid any attention to him at that distance.

Washington, D. C.
June 3, 1937.

Mr. Will Wobbel,
Petunia.

Dear Mr. Wobbel:

Your letter has worried me no little and I hasten to assure you that we were not actually at lunch all the afternoon. We merely remained at the table discussing the possibilities of adjourning Congress and naturally, due to the importance of the subject, much time was consumed in the discussion. I trust that my constituents do not for a moment think that I spend my time here consuming food. As a matter of fact, we leaders have little or no time to eat. I can assure you that every minute is needed to transact the important affairs of the Nation.

I am afraid that my good friend Ben Bumper misunderstood my little indisposition after lunch at his splendid home. I was, of course, not affected by the delicious food served by his charming wife, my very dear friend, Mrs. Bumper. I was, however, still somewhat upset by the unscrupulous remarks my opponent had made that morning in accusing me of voting against the interests of the people. That even an opponent could have the brazen effrontery to charge Cicero Fulpan with voting against the people took me by complete surprise and I was deeply upset by the thought of what political campaigns are coming to.

I trust that you will correct any misconception that my friend Bumper may have.

Yours sincerely,
CICERO FULPAN, M. C.

Petunia,
June 5, 1937.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Washington, D. C.

Dear Congressman Fulpan:

I explained your position to Ben Bumper and he said he didn't blame you. He is also sorry to learn that you leaders have to starve yourselves.

Please let me know what you have decided about the Supreme Court place.

Yours very truly,
WILL WOBBEL.

Washington, D. C.,
June 8, 1937.

Mr. Will Wobbel,
Petunia.

Dear Mr. Wobbel:

I assure you that I am deeply grateful for the generous offer of my friends to assist me in obtaining the Supreme Court appointment. Many of my friends here have also insisted that I permit my name to be mentioned and have even urged me to permit them to circulate a petition in Washington, but I must reluctantly decline as there are so many things to be accomplished by Congress and I cannot bring myself to desert my constituents at this crucial moment in history.

Trusting that you will understand my position, and thanking you again for your efforts in my behalf, I am

Yours sincerely,
CICERO FULPAN, M. C.

Petunia,
June 10, 1937.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Washington, D. C.

Dear Congressman Fulpan:

I am sorry that you haven't accomplished many things but I am glad that you are still hopeful. I showed your letter to Slim Slack and he said if you haven't done anything in Congress in all these years you ought to be glad to try something else.

Let me know if you have changed your mind yet.

Yours very truly,
WILL WOBBEL.

Washington, D. C.,
June 12, 1937.

Mr. Will Wobbel,
Petunia.

Dear Mr. Wobbel:

Your letter disturbs me again. I am afraid that my good friend Slim Slack received the wrong impression from my letter. I feel that I can point with some degree of pride to the many things which I have accomplished here. What my letter intended to convey was that I hope to accomplish many other things for my constituents specifically and for the country generally before I retire.

Trusting that you will correct the erroneous impression which friend Slack evidently has, I am,

Yours sincerely,
CICERO FULPAN, M. C.

Petunia,
June 15, 1937.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Washington, D. C.

Dear Congressman Fulpan:

I showed your letter to Slim again and he said that he was glad to learn that you had accomplished many things you could point with pride at and that he was sure that your other constituents would be glad to learn about it too.

Please let me know if you have still decided not to accept the Supreme Court.

Yours sincerely,
WILL WOBBEL.

Washington, D. C.,
June 17, 1937.

Mr. Will Wobbel,
Petunia.

Dear Mr. Wobbel:

My decision not to accept the Supreme Court appointment is final and irrevocable, but I want you to know that I appreciate your splendid efforts, and I trust that whenever I can be of service to you in the future you will not hesitate to call upon me.

Yours very sincerely,
CICERO FULPAN, M. C.

Petunia,
June 19, 1937.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Washington, D. C.

Dear friend Congressman:

I am sorry that you refuse to be Supreme Court judge, but I am glad that you are remaining our Congressman.

You suggested that you would be glad to help me. I have wanted to be a supervisor on the WPA, and there is a place open now on a new project in Biddlesville. I will be glad to accept it.

Trusting to hear from you that I have the place, I am,

Your friend,
WILL WOBBEL.

Washington, D. C.,
June 21, 1937.

Mr. Will Wobbel,
Petunia.

Dear Friend Wobbel:

I am sorry that I cannot assist you in obtaining a WPA appointment. This must come through the Senators.

Assuring you that I deeply regret my inability to assist you in this particular matter, I am,

Your friend,
CICERO FULPAN, M. C.

Petunia,
June 22, 1937.

Mr. Cicero Fulpan,
Doodler,
Washington, D. C.

What do you mean "friend?" You said you would help me and then turned me down flat, and after all I have done for you. People here thought you had as much power as a Senator.

If you take my advice you'll try to get that Supreme Court place if you want to stay in Washington after the next election.

WILL WOBBEL.

Washington, D. C.,
June 25, 1937.

Mr. Will Wobbel,
Petunia,

My dear Mr. Wobbel:

The Congressman has gone home again with a headache, but I am writing to inform you that your splendid suggestion has been filed for future reference.

Assuring you that the Congressman is always delighted to hear from one of his constituents, I am,

Yours sincerely,
WILLA DOOLITTLE,
Secretary.

CCC Educational Achievements.

The author of the following, which is reprinted from School Life, is the director of CCC camp education.

IN A RECENT STATEMENT before a congressional committee, Robert Fechner, director of emergency conservation work, stated: "With no disparagement to the huge work accomplishments of the CCC nor to its collateral economic and relief aspects, I feel that the creation and preservation of human values has been and continues to be the signal service of the CCC to the Nation."

The truth of the director's statement is certainly borne out by the accomplishments of the corps. Almost 2,000,000 young men have been members of the CCC since its inception over four years ago. They came from all walks of life—farms, small towns and cities. Many came from families that had never known anything but poverty, from homes where living conditions were unwholesome and insanitary. Others were from families once moderately prosperous but now victims of the depression.

Many had had few, if any, educational opportunities. A number had become disheartened over what the school had to offer them and had dropped out. Most of the men were undernourished. Months or years of idleness had stifled their ambitions, sapped their energies, and left them indifferent or hostile to every wholesome influence. Crime among young people was definitely on the increase. These hundreds of thousands of young men were a potential menace to the future of the country.

* * * *

SOON AFTER its inception, the CCC began to show results as a builder of men, and it has continued to add to this record of achievement. The camps supplied a new and wholesome environment for thousands of undeveloped youth. The hard work in the open air, the rugged life close to nature, the abundance of good, plain food, the association with enrollees, officers and supervisors, the pride in doing an honest day's work, recreational and educational opportunities—all these factors contributed to their physical, mental and moral change. Not only did most of them pick up from 10 to 15 pounds in weight, but their attitude toward life and surrounding conditions became better. A majority of them showed a greater desire to plan intelligently for their future, by choosing a vocation and preparing for it.

The educational program in the camps has faithfully served to help make the CCC the builder of men that it is. Since 1933 over 50,000 illiterates have been taught to read and write; more than 300,000 enrollees have been better grounded in grade-school subjects; over 200,000 have pursued high school courses, while 50,000 have taken college courses. Systematic instruction on CCC work projects has developed the vocational skills of over 1,000,000 men and has taught them the value of regular work habits and efficient management.

Upon reviewing the contributions of the CCC educational program, we find that it has focused public attention upon the unpreparedness of modern youth, has demonstrated the educational usefulness of the work project, and has applied on a Nation-wide basis progressive methods and techniques in educating enrollees.

* * * *

THE FACT that the CCC has found approximately 2.7 per cent of its enrollment illiterate and approximately 38 per cent on the elementary school level indicates in graphic fashion the unpreparedness of a sizable cross section of American youth. Add to this statement the fact that over three-fourths of the enrollees never received any systematic vocational training before reaching camp nor had many of them thought seriously of their occupational plans for the future. When we recall that the average age of the enrollee is around 20, we further recognize the extent of youth's retardation and lack of adjustment.

In demonstrating the educational usefulness of the work project, the camps have made a contribution not only to the men but also to the field of general education. The camp situation has restored a good deal of what had been lost through the formalization of education. It supplies an opportunity to get back to a natural type of education.

With the rise and formalization of the schools, there occurred a separation between the content of education and the work-a-day world, a separation between learning and doing. The separation of education from work is undesirable, first because education without application becomes academic and formal, and second because work without thought and study becomes drudgery. CCC education, in making use of the camp work project, restores the connection between learning and doing which has been overlooked in so much of our schooling.

* * * *

TO ACHIEVE the best possible results for each man, CCC education has made use of progressive methods and techniques. The counseling and guidance of each enrollee forms the foundation of the program. It is a student-centered program with the needs, abilities, and interests of the individual enrollee dictating the nature and content of the curriculum. This approach necessitates a very close relationship between the instructor and the learner. The instructor is constantly watching the progress of his student throughout his camp experiences to determine the type of work for which the youth is best fitted and to help him develop his preparation accordingly.

CCC classes are conducted on a discussion basis, with each participant feeling free to contribute a thought or an idea at any time. Films, slides, radio programs, charts, graphs, and shops are used to enrich and extend class work. Instructional materials, in large part, have been prepared by educational advisers or co-operating colleges and universities so as to meet the problems and interests of the men. Full use is made of all phases of the camp situation to broaden the contacts and experience of the men.

'Brain Trust' Leading Fight On Court Shift

Columbia Bureau Which Aided Roosevelt Now Helps Foes.

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 27.—The institution which gave President Roosevelt a large part of his original "brain trust" is ready today to provide ammunition for his foes in the Congressional battle over enlargement of the Supreme Court.

It was Columbia University which supplied such former advisers as Raymond Moley, Rexford G. Tugwell and A. A. Berle. Now it is Columbia's legislative drafting and research bureau on which opponents of the President's court plan depend.

The bureau has been at work, at the request of Senator Edward R. Burke, Nebraska Democrat, on a quick, simple method of putting the court issue before the country in the form of a constitutional amendment.

The bureau's plan will be offered as a counter-proposal to the President's in event the Administration tries to push its bill through by compromise. The court revision plan was disapproved by the Judiciary Committee.

Simple Process.

Changing the Constitution has proved a lengthy process in the past. Usually years are required. The Columbia bureau, headed by Law Prof. Joseph P. Chamberlain, has evolved two answers for quickening the process:

1. Submission of an amendment to the States in the same way in which the prohibition amendment was repealed. Under this method, the amendment would be voted on not by State legislatures (the usual procedure) but by State conventions whose delegates were chosen in State-wide elections. It worked so smoothly the one time it was tried that the repeal amendment was in effect nine months after Congress passed it in 1933.

2. A plan developed by Prof. Noel T. Downing, of the bureau staff, to amend the constitutional amending process so as to bring amendments to a direct vote of the people. Prof. Dowling suggests that amendments require only a majority vote in Congress instead of the present two-thirds vote; that the issue be submitted to all the States on the same day, as in a Presidential election; and that the amendment be declared ratified if it receives a majority vote in the Nation as a whole and in two-thirds of the States.

Founded in 1911.

The Columbia bureau has been a recognized authority in its field since its founding in 1911 with Harlan Fiske Stone, now associate justice of the Supreme Court; John Bassett Moore, former judge of the World Court, and Prof. Chamberlain, as trustees.

The legislative drafting bureaus of the two houses of Congress are offshoots of it, directed by former Columbia staff men. More directly, the university bureau has been active in war, marine and labor legislation. In constitutional law, its most significant works were its successful agitation for a Federal legal code and its development of the prohibition repeal convention plan.

Third-Term Fear Delays Congress, Capper Declares

By the Associated Press.

Senator Arthur Capper, of Kansas, said yesterday in an address broadcast in Kansas that "a third-term fear" is "partly responsible for the stalemate in Congress that has prevailed practically this entire session."

Capper said, "A number of Democratic leaders in Congress right now are trying to wrest control of the party from the White House, if I am any judge of what is going on politically these days."

He said Gov. Earle of Pennsylvania had brought open discussion by declaring himself for President Roosevelt for a third term. The Kansas Senator said he opposed third terms for Presidents, and was surprised at the number of persons who believe a third-term nomination for Mr. Roosevelt is a possibility.

Auto Firms Agree To Change in Ads

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Trade Commission announced yesterday manufacturers of ten automobile lines have agreed to correct alleged discrepancies between pictures and prices in some of their advertisements.

The companies promised that prices published with pictures of cars will show the exact cost of the cars as pictured, including extra accessories shown in the photographs or drawings, or the difference will be explained clearly.

Stipulations were signed by the Hudson Motor Car Co., Graham-Paige Motors Corporation, the Studebaker Corporation, Studebaker Sales Corporation of America, Chrysler Corporation, Nash-Kelvinator Corporation, Packard Motor Car Co., Auburn Automobile Co., Chrysler Sales Corporation, and the DeSoto, Dodge Brothers and Plymouth subsidiaries of Chrysler Corporation.

The Automobile Manufacturers Association said the changes in advertising policy asked by the commission were placed in effect last December.

U. S. Experts to Study Synthetic Motor Fuel

By the Associated Press.

A group of American scientists and industrial experts will sail for Europe soon to study methods of developing synthetic fabrics and motor fuels.

Dr. Henry G. Knight, Agricultural Department scientist, who heads the delegation, said European countries in pursuing "self-sufficiency policies" have discovered methods of producing cloth without wool, cotton or flax and making motor fuels from such material as potatoes.

Soviet Chiefs Disappear as Purge Goes On

Air Commander and Flier Levanevsky Are Missing; Believed Jailed.

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, June 27.—The unexplained absence of two prominent Russians from an official welcoming party for Dr. Otto Schmidt, returning last Friday from the Russian North Pole air base, led to reports today they had been arrested.

The missing persons are Gen. Y. I. Alksnis, vice commissar of defense, and chief of Red Army air forces, and Sigmund Levanevsky, Arctic flier well known in the United States.

Foreigners speculated that their absence indicated the current wave of arrests within the army and elsewhere is continuing.

Alksnis served in the defense commissariat with the late Vice Commissar Tuckachevsky.

On Flight Board.

He and Levanevsky normally would have been present for the homecoming reception but neither was seen. Alksnis had been reported in difficulty a few days ago, but the reports died down temporarily when he was reported drafted for the court which tried and condemned Tukachevsky and seven other generals on charges of treason.

Ten days ago Alksnis was a member of the government flight committee which arranged the transpolar flight, and he was among those who bade bood-by to Valeri Chekaloff and his companions as they set off for the United States.

Belief had been current in foreign circles that Levanevsky was making secret preparations for a second flight to the United States, to follow Chekaloff.

Two Flights in Prospect.

Now, however, it is fairly well established that other pilots are preparing for this attempt, which likely will be made before mid-July with probably even greater secrecy than the one just completed.

There are reports also that a third flight is in prospect later in the summer.

Another whose arrest is rumored is Alexander Aroseff, president of the Voks, society for cultural relations with foreign countries.

Tenor to Risk Conscription On Visit Home

Nino Martini Is Eligible to Draft by Il Duce; Astaire to Sail.

By the United Press.

Hollywood, June 27.—When Nino Martini visits Italy this summer he'll go equipped with an assumed name and smoked glasses as protection against a possible whim of Benito Mussolini to slap him into an Italian uniform and tell him he's a soldier.

Martini is due in Verona in August to attend the wedding of his favorite sister, Iolanda Martini. He'll probably sail August 7, after finishing R. K. O.'s "Music for Madame."

The Olive-skinned tenor has signified his intention of becoming a citizen of the United States, but he's still technically a subject of Il Duce, and highly eligible for military service.

"My military class is one above that currently called for active service," he explained. "But a change in affairs might easily result in my being conscripted."

Another possibility equally disturbing to Martini is that Mussolini might decide that art begins at home, and detain him in Italy to do his warbling on home grounds.

Astair Also Sailing.

Nimble Fred Astaire will be off to England late in August for his longest vacation in five years. He'll be gone three months, and will spend the time visiting his sister, Lady Adele Astaire Cavendish and catching the London shows. Astaire is about to begin "Damsel in Distress," his first stellar picture without Ginger Rogers as a dancing partner.

Mary Pickford, who has been watching Buddy Rogers do his stuff daily on the Paramount lot, staged a real reunion when she strolled onto the "Ebb Tide" set and met James Hogan, director who was given his first chance with the megaphone in 1916 when Miss Pickford was making "Less Than Dust."

Hogan, prop man on the picture, asked for the director's job when John Emerson fell ill and Eric von Stroheim, his assistant, resigned.

Miss Pickford said: "Sure, Irish, take a chance." Today's meeting was their first in ten years.

A Tough Order.

Robert Benchely, humorist turned actor, has probably gone too far this time. He got away with shorts on "How to Sleep," "How to Vote," and "How to Go to Bed." But this time he has taken on the subject "How to Raise a Baby."

Gregory Ratoff, while viewing rushes of "Life of a Lancer Spy," which he is directing, screamed: "The laboratory has ruined my picture. It is too dark. Why do they do this to me?"

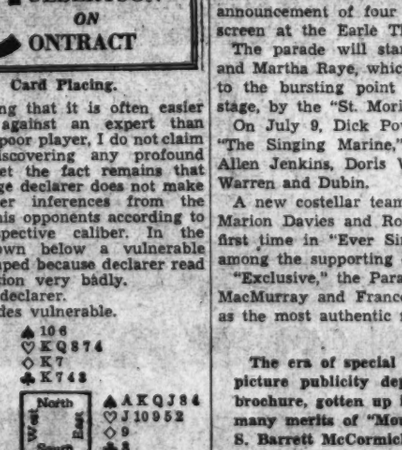
Note handed him by Darryl F. Zanuck, production chief, who also was in the projection room—"Gregory: Why don't you take off those dark glasses you are wearing?"

MRS. ELY CULBERTSON ON CONTRACT

Card Placing.

In stating that it is often easier to play against an expert than against a poor player, I do not claim to be discovering any profound truth. Yet the fact remains that the average declarer does not make the proper inferences from the plays of his opponents according to their respective caliber. In the hand shown below a vulnerable game escaped because declarer read the situation very badly.

South, declarer.
Both sides vulnerable.



The bidding:

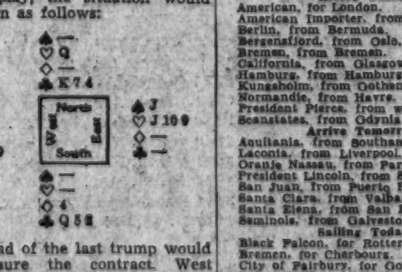
South	West	North	East
3 ◇	Pass	3 ♡	3 ♠
4 ◇	Pass	5 ◇	Pass
Pass	Pass

The bidding:

West opened his highest spade, East cashed the Ace and King, then shifted to the eight of clubs. Declarer won this in his own hand, crossed to dummy's diamond King, and then led the heart King through East. Declarer reasoned that the clubs might not break, in which case it would be necessary to establish a heart trick for a club discard. This thought was good as far as it went but, unfortunately, it did not go far enough.

There could be no great harm done by the lead of the heart King—if East had the Ace and should cover, declarer would ruff, draw trumps, and eventually use the heart Queen for discarding purposes.

But the great point here was that when East did not cover, declarer should have known that he did not have the Ace! There would have been no reason, or excuse, for East to fail to cover. When the heart King brought nothing but the deuce from East, instead of discarding a club, declarer should have ruffed and run off trumps. With one trump left to play, the situation would have been as follows:



The lead of the last trump would now insure the contract. West would have to let go a club in order to hold on to the heart Ace, and this would solidify declarer's club suit. Obviously, if West were to let go the heart Ace, dummy's heart Queen would become good with the club King for entry.

Nelson B. Bell About The Showshops

Shirley Temple Is to Graduate to Dramatic Roles; Has Led Box-Office Ratings for the Past Two Years

Tiny Star Will Be Supported by Strong Cast of Adults in Next Picture; Tickets on Sale for Showmen's Boxing Show; Pictures on the Way; New Civic Director; Notes of the Amusement World.

SHIRLEY TEMPLE is growing up—both physically and artistically. (Voice from the back of the hall: "Well, it's about time!") That is, she is, if late advices from the West Coast are to be relied upon, and one supposes they are.

BELL.

Heretofore, little Miss Shirley has been starred in pictures which have stressed her own individual talents as a juvenile entertainer—her singing, dancing and infinite capacity for being "cute." Now, it seems, all that is to be changed. With the production of "Wee Willie Winkie," on the Twentieth Century-Fox lot, she definitely begins the portrayal of strong dramatic roles in pictures produced on an imposing scale with strong supporting adult casts.

"Wee Willie Winkie," Rudyard Kidpling's story of northern India, has been adapted to the screen in the form of an action-packed drama, set against the rugged picturesqueness of Khyber Pass. Directed by John Ford, winner of the Academy award for his work on "The Informer," the cast will include Victor McLaglen, also an "Informer" Academy award winner; C. Aubrey Smith, Cesar Romero, Constance Collier, June Lang and Michael Whalen. The picture has been three months in the making and has employed as high as 1,000 extras for some of its scenes.

There are various criteria by which stellar popularity may be judged—volume of fan mail, crowds at personal appearances, longevity of career, etc.—but the one unerring index is the box-office. The box-office rating of a picture is expressed in terms of the return it brings the exhibitor over the rental he must pay for it. Thus, a picture which returns an average profit is rated 100 per cent. Shirley Temple's pictures for the past two years have averaged the almost unprecedented figure of 152 per cent. There have been individual releases which have exceeded this figure, but no present-day star, it is believed, steadily at work, has approached that figure as an average for even one year.

If one were to search the records, it would be found that Rudolph Valentino, at the height of his popularity, rated slightly higher than Shirley now does, and Mary Pickford, back in the silent days, showed a somewhat higher rating. Charlie Chaplin also is rated above Shirley, but makes only one picture about every three years, while Shirley maintains a regular schedule of four pictures a year.

On the basis of this evidence, Miss Temple is the unquestioned leader of all Hollywood's stars and her record has been exceeded by only three players in the history of the motion picture.

In view of all this, it seems highly fitting that this richly endowed youngster should be permitted to outgrow her "baby days." Anyway, she no longer is a baby.

Tickets for "Washington's biggest boxing show," which the local Variety Club, with the sponsorship of The Washington Post, will unfurl in Griffith Stadium on Tuesday night, July 20, will be placed on sale this morning. The National Theater box office has been secured as the central downtown point of sale, with tickets also available at the respective offices of Goldie Ahearn and Joe Turner, as well as Sidney B. Lust's, in the Earle Theater Building. Other points of purchase will be Dr. Archie Engel's, Fourteenth and F streets; Spaulding's sporting goods store, on Fourteenth street between G and H, and at all the leading hotels. Freddie Steele, world's middleweight champion, who will be opposed by Charles "Hobo" Williams in the main bout, already is in Washington to train for the fight and today will be guest of honor at a Variety Club luncheon at the Willard.

Film enthusiasts who like to look ahead will be interested in the announcement of four films of the first rank that are coming to the screen at the Earle Theater during impending weeks.

The parade will start with "Mountain Music," starring Bob Burns and Martha Raye, which comes to town on Friday of this week, packed to the bursting point with hillbilly hilarity and augmented, on the stage, by the "St. Moritz Ice Carnival."

On July 9, Dick Powell will return to the local screen as star of "The Singing Marine," in which he is supported by Hugh Herbert, Allen Jenkins, Doris Weston, Lee Dixon and Larry Adler. Music by Warren and Dubin.

A new costellar team will be introduced the week of July 16, when Marion Davies and Robert Montgomery will be seen together for the first time in "Ever Since Eve." Frank McHugh and Patsy Kelly are among the supporting cast.

"Exclusive," the Paramount picture scheduled for July 23, with Fred MacMurray and Frances Farmer at the head of the cast, is described as the most authentic newspaper story ever filmed. Quite a line-up.

The era of special bindings seems to have overtaken the motion-picture publicity departments. There come to hand a handsome brochure, gotten up in the ornate or grand manner, concerning the many merits of "Mountain Music;" a folder-inclosed "special" from S. Barrett McCormick, of RKO-Radio, on "New Faces of 1937" and its relation to the problem of screen-star broadcastings, and a letter from Carmen Josephy, of the new Cinema Arts Magazine, stating that the editorial staff was so pleased that I was pleased with the first issue that, "We are sending you under separate cover a specially bound copy of the second (July) issue which we have had printed for private distribution." This is all very flattering, especially since all of these items have your name printed right out on the front cover.

Disconsolate, for a time, because Day Tuttle's acceptance of a handsome Hollywood offer would necessitate his leaving the National Capital, the Washington Civic Theater now has returned to normal. This is occasioned by the fact that F. Cowles Strickland, widely known in the theater for his excellent work with the St. Louis Little Theater, has accepted the post of director as Mr. Tuttle's successor.

Mr. Strickland comes to Washington with many years of professional experience behind him as director of the famous Stockbridge, Mass., summer theater for seven years, in addition to his work in St. Louis and on Broadway. He will direct seven major productions, a number of unusual workshop evenings and will hold classes for members of the Civic group, according to present plans. He will meet with the membership of the theater for the first time tomorrow night.

Are Reunited in New Film Play

When Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's production of "The Emperor's Candlesticks" is shown on the screen at Loew's Capitol Theater on Friday, the principal roles will be played by William Powell and Luise Rainer, pictured above with the objects concerned in the title. Miss Rainer made her American screen debut opposite Powell in "Escapade" in 1935. Since then she has appeared in "The Great Ziegfeld," also with Powell, and "The Good Earth" and won the Academy award for the best screen acting of 1936.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDDLER

Hollywood, June 27.—Idol Chatter: When Bill Powell meets former-mate Carole Lombard night clubbing, he cannot hide a self-conscious grin. Atmospheric pressure: Loretta Young seldom eats in the studio cafe without first donning Chinese pajamas. For Old-Folks-At-Home-Week, I'll take Jack Oakie and Andy Devine. Peas from the same pod: Martha Raye and the girl in those "gain weight" ads. Wonder if Shirley Temple will be kissable at 16.

POWELL.

Similar silhouettes: Robert Taylor and Cary Grant. Every photograph of Joan Crawford shows her chin atilt, seemingly saying: "So there!" In need of good pictures to bolster fading prestige: Marlene Dietrich. No two personalities ever dove-tailed like Marie Dressler and Wallace Beery. Hollywoodese for "the picture is finished:" "It in the can." Sometimes, Randolph Scott looks like he is made up to look like Gary Cooper. A hireling follows Jack Benny around to help him resist fat-building sandwiches, which is a job.

Frances Farmer has the same narrow-gauge lips with which Jetta Goudal tempted yesterday's movie heroes. Impressionistic drawings of Jean Parker: Venus-in-calico. This single line of dialogue cost $2,000 in retakes: "If I had every slaver shackled to a sinking slave ship." When an actor says, "Well, just one more little one," it's time to tell him that alcohol and grease-paint don't mix. Cheers: Despite loss of two fingers in an accident, Harold Lloyd, via a self-styled bowling ball, retains his place on the studio team.

I have always wondered if screen stars—those who have not completely lost their sense of balance—are as disgusted by the insane flattery of the boot-licking brigade as I am when I overhear it. Apparently some are. A few days ago, when I was lunching with Joan Blondell in a studio cafe, a woman rushed up to our table and gushed so gooily about Joan's "mahvelous" performances in her latest picture that she seemed on verge of a swoon. After the intruder had hurled her last exclamation point and departed, Joan said:

"If you ever see me going Hollywood, remind me of that woman. Not 10 minutes ago I passed her office, and she was panning me to a crisp!"

Down in Santa Monica, a man had a bright idea and opened an ultra-ultra cafe for motion picture trade only. The dining room was carpeted with velvet, the string orchestra played soft music, the walls were sound-proofed, no one could dine there without making a reservation. Everything was designed for one purpose—to give patrons absolute privacy. You see, the man with the great idea had learned from fan magazines that all the stars in Hollywood pine to escape the stares of the curious. He sent out engraved announcements which guaranteed that there would be no autograph hunters, gossip writers or other pests to annoy celebrities.

The cafe closed last week. The disillusioned owner told me not one important star ever entered the place.

There's something pathetic about Joe E. Brown's worship of sport celebrities. I honestly believe he is prouder of the baseballs, bats, boxing gloves and footballs that are displayed in his home than he would be of a dozen academy awards. He showed me his collection last night and I will never forget the reverence with which he pointed out the autographs of ahtletic heroes.

"Maybe I like such things," he said, "because I went on the stage when I was just a kid, and I never had much chance to play."

Little

That gay musical production that established Eleanor Powell as one of the foremost dancing stars of the cinema, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Broadway Melody of 1936," is being revived this week at the Little Theater, where it opened yesterday for a week's engagement. The principal comedy role is played by that droll funster, Jack Benny.

"Broadway Melody of 1936" adheres to a sort of skeleton plot, but dashes along at such a speedy pace, with its catchy tunes, nimble dances and comedy scenes that narrative becomes a second consideration and only entertainment remains.

The supporting cast in this subject is one of almost uniformly stellar selection and the big musical numbers are participated in by hordes of beautiful young coryphees who lend "glamor" to every scene in which they appear. These mammoth scenes, furthermore, have been staged with prodigal opulence and photographed with overwhelmingly artistic effect. If you have not seen this picture, you should.

The bill is completed by the usual short-reel subjects and newsreel.

FEATURE STORY: Norman Thomas, who recently returned from Europe, conferred privately with Premier Leon Blum in Paris . . . "When do you expect War to break out?" Thomas asked. . . . "What are you talking about?" Blum replied. . . . "I'm asking—when do you expect Europe to break out into War?" Thomas repeated. . . . "That broke out long ago," Blum returned. "We're lucky though, that it's isolated in the Iberian Peninsula."

FINANCE DEPT.: Robert J. Casey, Col. Frank Knox's star reporter, was instructed by his home office to proceed from Long Island, where he was covering the Parsons case, to Youngstown, Ohio, to report on the steel situation. . . . Casey went to the telegraph office to get the expense money which had been wired him. The man in charge, Mr. Shapiro, decreed that Casey's press card was not adequate identification. . . . The reporter then showed his Knights of Columbus card. Mr. Shapiro still was reluctant, but finally gave Casey the money—when the Celt produced a card proclaiming him an Honorary member of the Houston (Tex.) B'nai B'rith.

POLITICS: W. Paul Pickhardt, chairman of Agfa-Ansco Co., tendered a party for his sister, Mrs. Dorothy Kahle, at the Ambassador early this week. Mrs. Kahle had been campaign manager for her brother in his re-election as trustee of Deering Harbor, at the tip of Long Island. . . . Pickhardt was elected unanimously, by a vote of 9 to 0 . . . which is most amazing—since there are only eight voters in all of Deering Harbor!

BOOK DEPT.: Alexander Woollcott, who by ringing his Town Crier's Bell gets all the physical exercise he wants, already has determined what his next book will be. It will be a booksie wooksie about French poodles.

• • • •

FASHION DEPT.: One of the most striking exhibits at the current French Exposition in Paris is a handsome life-size statue of Anthony Eden, the British diplomat. The statue graces the English division of the fair, and is causing much comment. . . . It was erected not as a tribute to Eden's cunning in diplomacy nor for his loyalty to his country—but solely as an example of the well-dressed Englishman.

LABOR DEPT.: Not many months ago Heaton Vorse, son of Novelist Mary Heaton Vorse, was severely injured while covering a strike riot near Flint, Mich., for a labor press syndicate. He was hurt so badly that his mother rushed to his bedside and pleaded that he stay away from any more explosive labor demonstrations. . . . Three days ago the face of Mary Heaton Vorse, badly cut and bleeding profusely, adorned the front pages here. She had been injured while picketing a steel mill in central Pennsylvania.

TRAVEL DEPT.: Gene Fowler is staying at a terrace apartment in New York, preparatory to moving to Fire Island. . . . Mr. Fowler walked out on the terrace and started to do some writing. Every half hour, however, he was interrupted by the drone of planes flying overhead. At the sixth interruption, Fowler cupped his hands and shouted: "Hey, you, what're you guys doing—making an alley out of this?"

MOVIES: When "June Moon" first opened on Broadway, Benny Baker frequented the stage door and practically was a stooge for the star of the show, Harry Rosenthal. . . . Mr. Rosenthal wasn't considered for the screen-version of the play, which now is being screened, and at present is conducting the orchestra at the Versailles. His role was assigned—to Benny Baker.

NATURE DEPT.: Last week two pigeons flew to Clara Bell Walsh's window sill at the Plaza and deposited two new eggs. Mrs. Walsh spied them, but discovered that whenever the birds noticed that she was looking, they'd rise from the eggs and walk away. She therefore closed her window, drew the blinds and stayed away. . . . The pigeons, however, got their revenge for Mrs. Walsh's previous interruptions. When she raised the blinds yesterday, the lady was greeted by a nontragrant odor. The birds had departed—and left two bad eggs.

RADIO DEPT.: Charles Kullmann, Metropolitan tenor, broadcast the opera "Sari" last week. . . . During rehearsals he noticed a middle-aged woman enter the studio and asked her if she was enjoying the program. The woman nodded. . . . She was Mitzi Hajos, who had become famous eighteen years ago for her brilliant singing in "Sari." She's playing a bit-role now in "You Can't Take It With You." And across the street, featured in "Babes in Arms," is a young lady whose mother was in that company of "Sari"—and who idolized the soprano so much that she named her first born Mitizi—Mitzi Green.

97 Flying Cadets Will Be Promoted

Ninety-seven flying cadets at six of the Nation's Army training fields will be commissioned as second lieutenants July 1, General Headquarters Air Force officials announced yesterday. Lack of Congressional appropriations had prevented them from assuming the rank of second lieutenant immediately after graduation.

The appropriations affect 19 flying cadets at Langley Field, Va.; 5 at Mitchell Field, New York; 16 at Selfridge Field, Mount Clemens, Mich.; 34 at March Field, Riverside, Calif.; 10 at Hamilton Field, San Rafael, Calif., and 23 at Barsdale Field, Shreveport, La.

Kenton Kilmers Arrive For Visit in Virginia

Former Miss Frances Frieseke Is Daughter of Frederick Carl Frieseke, Famous French Painter; Husband Son of Poet.

By Hope Ridings Miller.
The Post Society Editor.

While wedding bells have been ringing day and night in the Capital, and social Washington has divided its time between witnessing nuptial rites and feting noted foreigners, a young couple has quietly arrived in Virginia without the fanfare generally accorded to newlyweds of noted heritage.

Mr. and Mrs. Kenton Kilmer, whose wedding was solemnized in Calvados, France, on June 2, have been guests of Mr. and Mrs. Leo P. Harlow at Journey's End, Jefferson Park, Va., for several days, and will remain there until they move into the house they have leased at 2512 Custis road, Arlington, Va.

The bride was formerly Miss Frances Frieseke, only child of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Carl Frieseke of La Beauvairie, Mesnil-sur-Blangy, par Blangy-le-Chauteau, Calvados. Her father is the widely known artist. His "Girl at the Piano" won the second W. A. Clark prize ($1,500) at the fourteenth biennial exhibition of contemporary American oil paintings at the Corcoran Gallery of Art. His paintings are in a number of permanent collections in large art museums of Europe and America, including the Corcoran.

Bride's Father Well Known Here

He has an extensive circle of friends in Washington, many of whom have been associated with him through his connection with the Corcoran; but one of his closest friends struck up her acquaintanceship with him while both were art students in Paris. She is Representative Caroline O'Day; and through the years she has noted his achievements with special interest, since early in his career she recognized his exceptional talent.

One of the highest honors that has come to Mr. Frieseke was his receiving the Legion of Honor award for his work in the development of art. But Mrs. Kilmer's distinction does not rest solely on her father's fame. She has already made a name for herself as a poet, and although she is in her early twenties she has written four books of verse, including "The Poor King's Daughter and Other Poems." At one time she was vice president of the Catholic Poetry Society of America.

Kenton Kilmer is also a poet—as would be expected of the son of Aline Kilmer, widely known poet of Stillwater, N. J., and the late Joyce Kilmer, war hero, journalist and poet, who wrote, among other poems, the famous "Trees." Widely known in Washington, Kenton Kilmer is a graduate of Georgetown University and was a graduate student at Catholic University year before last. At present he is connected with the Federal Housing Administration.

Hostess Is Also Poet of Distinction

While the Kilmers are guests of the Harlows, chances are poetry will be a favored topic of conversation, for Mrs. Harlow—who signs her verse Caroline Giltinan—is one of the few writers around Washington producing poetry worthy of the name.

Mrs. Harlow and Mrs. Kilmer are cousins, and Mrs. Harlow's daughter, Miss Faith Harlow, was maid of honor in the Kilmer wedding, and is still in France as the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Frieseke. She will be abroad through the summer. Mr. Frieseke will paint her portrait before she returns.

Christopher Kilmer, brother of the bridegroom, was best man. Mrs. Harlow also went to France with her daughter to attend the wedding.

Party Is Given For Mrs. Keyes

Mrs. Frances Parkinson Keyes was honor guest yesterday afternoon at a small informal party given from 5 to 7 o'clock by Miss Virginia Price for members of the press and other guests at the Washington Golf and Country Club.

Mrs. Keyes, whose newest book, "Capital Kaleidoscope," was recently released, will be leaving for Europe Wednesday, June 30, on the S. S. Hamburg for a two-month tour through France and Germany. Miss Harriet Whitford, daughter of Mrs. George Langdon Whitford, will accompany Mrs. Keyes as her guest.

Wearing an afternoon ensemble of gray, Mrs. Keyes greeted the guests with the hostess, who was attired in a white sport frock and a white felt hat. During the evening the guests were served dainty sandwiches and cocktails at small tables which had been placed in the ballroom.

Among other guests aside from the local newspaper group were Mrs. Ellen S. Woodward, assistant administrator of the WPA; Mr. Leslie Wheeler, head of the Foreign Service of the Department of Agriculture and Mrs. Wheeler; Mr. Harry Boyle Gauss, correspondent of the Chicago Daily News; Col. Christopher Garnett, jr., Mrs. George Langdon Whitford and Miss Ordway Whitford.

Miss Kelley Wed To Mr. Ekstrand

Miss Virginia May Kelley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alonzo L. Kelley, of 808 North Jackson street, Arlington, and Mr. Wilbur Theodore Ekstrand, son of Mr. Carl T. Ekstrand, of Livingston, Mont., were married yesterday afternoon in the First Baptist Church in Arlington. The Rev. Perry L. Mitchell, pastor of the church, officiated.

The bride wore a dress of navy sheer, with a white collar and white accessories. Her bouquet was of orchids. Mrs. Lyman M. Kelley, her sister-in-law, was matron of honor and only attendant. She was attired in pale-blue lace with pink hat and pink accessories, and she carried pink roses.

Earl E. Brown was best man.

Sorority Chapter Members Feted

Mrs. Reed Gives Party for Phi Mu Unit.

Mrs. John Reed, an alumna member of Phi Mu Sorority, opened her home Saturday afternoon for a party given by Beta Chapter, George Washington University. The affair was to have been a garden party but the rain, coming just at the hour of the guests' arrival, caused it to be held inside.

About 50 were present. Miss Mildred Patterson, of Washington, vice president of Beta Alpha Chapter, was chairman of the committee in charge, with Mary Kunna, of Washington, treasurer, and Miss Elizabeth Rhinehart assisting her. Other chapter officers include Miss Mary Martin, of Little Rock, Ark., president, and Miss Aileen O'Connor, of Washington, secretary.

Sails for Europe.

Mrs. Simon Kann sailed from New York yesterday on the Rex for Europe, where she will spend several months in travel, chiefly around the Mediterranean.

Miss Doris Bartlett Draper Is Wed in Cape Cod Hospital

Mr. Charles Edgar Rogers 3d Is Ill With Appendicitis on Date Set for His Marriage to U. S. Official's Daughter.

Of wide interest in Washington was the marriage Saturday of Miss Doris Bartlett Draper, daughter of Ernest G. Draper, Assistant Secretary of Commerce, and Mrs. Mary C. Draper of New York, and Mrs. Charles Edgar Rogers 3d, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Rogers, jr., of Brooklyn, N. Y.

The marriage took place in a private room in Cape Cod Hospital at Hyannis, Mass.

The formal wedding, which had been planned to take place in St. Barnabas Memorial Church, was postponed, due to the illness of Mr. Rogers, who was stricken with acute appendicitis. The wedding party, however, went to the hospital to witness the ceremony. The bride was given in marriage by her father.

The maid of honor was Miss Mary Draper, sister of the bride, and other attendants were Mrs. John B. Dunlap, the bridegroom's sister, of Brooklyn, N. Y., and Mrs. Thomas Willets Lapham and Miss Ann Faison, also of Brooklyn; Mrs. Charles W. B. Wardell, jr., of Philadelphia, and Miss Isabelle Marckwald, of Short Hills, N. J.

Mr. Benjamin Douglas Hill, of Mamaroneck, N. Y., was best man and those to have been ushers were Messrs. John Griswold and Constantine Mittendorf, of New York; William Elliott and Frederick Pafford, jr., of Brooklyn; David Steers, of Bronxville, N. Y., and Ryan Berry, of Hollywood, Calif.

Mrs. Rogers was graduated from Vassar College in 1935 and also attended the Geneva College for Women in Switzerland. She is a member of the New York Junior League.

Mr. Rogers attended the Polytechnic Preparatory County Day School and was graduated from Yale University with the class of 1937. He will be connected with the Bank of New York & Trust Co.

Hostess at Dinner.

Mrs. Francis B. Landsdale entertained at the Willard Hotel at dinner last night for Miss Marie C. Moore, of Greenwich, Conn. Mrs. Landsdale and her son, Thomas, will accompany Miss Moore to Durham, Conn., next, where they will be guests of Mrs. Ralph C. Eckels for the month of July.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Girl Asks How to Revive Interest of Long-Time Beau Who Now Seems Bored and Weary.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: For the past two years I have been keeping company with a boy whom I love very much. It seems as if his love for me is beginning to wane. Either someone else has come into his life or he is simply growing tired of me. He often works at night and he has always said if I had opportunities to go out with others on those evenings, to accept, as there would be no hard feeling on his part.

* * * *

Until recently he was the life of the party when we went out with other couples. Now he says scarcely a word, which is very embarrassing to me. He pleads that he is tired. He makes a good salary but he seems to hate to spend it on our pleasure, although always willing to spend on others or to lend his last dime, thus making it impossible for us to go any place or do anything. What should I do under the circumstances? Any advice will be appreciated.
Sincerely, M. E. D.

* * * *

DEAR M. E. D.: The time has come to put a brand-new face on the association or break off altogether. Stop seeing the young man for a while. Tell him it's plain to be seen that you've gotten on each other's nerves; that you are bored to death with each other's company. Tell him you wish to see if a course of "absent treatment" will improve the situation; and, if it doesn't, that you think it will be best to go your separate ways in future. Then, don't give him another engagement until he shows real enthusiasm for and marked appreciation of your society.

* * * *

In other words, don't go out with him again unless he is sufficiently interested to swallow several polite rejections before getting an invitation finally accepted, and until he is willing to suggest an evening's diversion which will necessitate the spending of some money—as, for instance, dinner and dancing, or dinner and the movies.

* * * *

The smartest move, of course, would be to get yourself another beau; for it is my opinion that this young man never has been seriously interested in you, and that you have made the mistake of wearing your heart on your sleeve for him. The unexpected acquisition of another suitor, coupled with an announced determination to live without him if necessary, may cause him to realize you are more necessary to his happiness than he has supposed.
M. H.

Tomorrow's Mail

Reader who, until now, has agreed wholeheartedly with this columnist's opinions, feels "obliged to differ emphatically" with answer given June 25 to "Anxious," the 20-year-old girl who wished to know whether or not she should marry young man with whom she has been having an affair. The letter appears here tomorrow.

His Letters Grow Cold.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: For six years I have been exchanging letters with a young man who lives in a distant State. We have seen each other only twice during that time. I like him immensely and, until recently, he seemed to be equally devoted to me. We had many interests in common. Lately, however, he seems to be growing less and less interested. I am terribly distressed, for the bottom would simply drop out of things if I were to lose him. What can I do to revive and hold his interest?
PUZZLED.

* * * *

DEAR PUZZLED: If you are wise, you will let this friendship-by-correspondence go by the board, without undue regret; thankful for whatever companionship you have found in it thus long. It is expiring of old age, and nothing on earth can be done to restore the breath of life to it. It is only natural that the young man, if he is a normal human being, should realize its futility, and turn eventually to persons on the immediate scene for wholesome, flesh-and-blood companionship. I advise you to do the same. M. H.

Dissatisfied Customer.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: The letter in your column of June 22, signed "Shopkeeper," stirs up a lot of thoughts I have been thinking about this town of yours (mine, too, unfortunately) for the past two and a half years. After doing a great deal of shopping in places like New York, San Francisco, Los Angeles, and some of the larger cities in the Middle West, I feel I have plenty of background from which to criticize the local shopkeepers.

* * * *

In the first place, when one walks into a shop here, the attitude assumed by some of the saleswomen that "I'm just here because my family lost its millions" irks the average customer sorely and puts her on the defensive. In the second place, you usually walk out in a fury because some frowzy salesperson tries to tell you that the gown, hat or accessory you are looking for either is not being shown this season (even though it has been pictured for a month in a leading style magazine) or that there are other things which would suit your purpose better.

* * * *

You may be looking for just an ordinary pair of black shoes, but they'll tell you black shoes are definitely out at this time of the year. Sometimes I think during one of these sessions that I'll slap the saleswoman, although I am thought to be a well-behaved and civilized person. Ordinarily my size runs from 12 to 14, so surely I have no size difficulties; but try as I will, I can't for the life of me get that smartly-turned-out look with clothes from even the best shops here that is acquired with such ease in other large cities.

* * * *

I am not alone in my opinion. There are many people here who think this town needs well-trained and courteous salespeople and shops that carry smarter and better quality merchandise. Surely the price you need to pay here for just an ordinary costume should guarantee some kind of satisfaction, if only courteous and interested service—but it definitely does not.
CUSTOMER.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Couturiers Create Unusual Blouses

Paris (U.P.).—The increasing popularity of tailored suits for spring and summer wear has made all the big couturiers work feverishly to produce amusing and unusual blouses. As most of the summer suits are in linen, piques or lightweight flannels, few silk blouses are to be seen.

White organdy is the most popular choice for tailored as well as frilly blouses. Frilly jabots, with scalloped or lace edges, run from the high necks to the waists of these blouses, which are usually made with short puffed sleeves and slightly elevated shoulders. Fine tucking is used at the shoulders and at the waists and some of the organdy blouses are tucked into square patterns which run over the entire material.

Shoes Go Gay.

New York (A.P.).—Race track fashions indicate great interest in shoes of bright-colored leather. Copper and rust shades are particular favorites and bright red and wine are popular. All four provide gay accents for beige costumes.

Polka Dots Take Lead in Midsummer Fashions

Appear in All Types of Fabrics, and for the First Time Crash Formal Gatherings.

By Ethel Ehlen.
The Post Fashion Editor.

IT'S A SPOTTY midseason, with dots all over the style picture. There are coin and pin dots, patterened dots and yarn dots contrasting with the background of the material, also embroidered dots in self-color. These are all cleverly interpreted in silk crepe, cottons, and sheer fabrics. Light dots on dark grounds and dark dots on white backgrounds are equally popular and smart.

Formerly dots were considered very informal. This summer, dotted patterns go to dinners, dances, cocktails and garden parties, as well as being a smart design for business and general daytime wear. They abound in travel clothes.

Afternoon tea-dancing has inspired an attractive styling in dotted fabrics of silk crepe or chiffon, made with a full skirt, basque-like bodice and short, puffed sleeves. If you are ensemble-minded, a hat of the dress material is a chic topping. A versatile costume for general informal daytime and evening wear is a one-piece frock of dotted sheer with a jacket or cape of the same material.

If you have an aversion to dotted costumes, you can still follow this smart trend by planning frocks and suits in solid color tones and the accessories in dotted patterns. Hats, handbags, gloves, scarfs, shoes and jewelry are available in unique colors and dotted designs to accent white or dark-colored summer costumes. Dotted skirts in black, navy or brown are also chic worn with white jacket-blouses; in this event the accessories may be either dotted or in solid tones.

An outfit to be worn late into the summer is the jacket-frock above of black chiffon with white polka dots. The striking accessories are in the new burnt straw color, which is so effective with black. White, black or bright-colored accessories would be equally smart.

The white dotted navy blue taffeta dress above may be worn for either daytime or informal evening events. The skirt, made of graduated bands of the fabric shirred together, was inspired by Molyneux. The perky Breton sailor is of the same material as the dress.

TODAY'S HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Logan Clendening.

Fall Hay Fever.

The experienced old stager at hay fever no longer indulges in the fond hope that he is going to be free from symptoms this year. He knows he is going to get it whether it is a mild season or a severe one. He is on the spot, and he makes preparations accordingly, beginning about now.

One kind of preparation is for a vacation. The fall hay fever will start about August 15, when the ragweed begins to cast its light yellow pollen on the air. It isn't very thick until about August 20, so if you plan your vacation then you will not have much discomfort. It's a little tough to have to go away just when the other vacationists are coming back, but the laugh is really on them, because September is a beautiful month at American resorts, and in the workaday part of the country it may be one of the hottest months of the summer, so the too early returning vacationist may spoil his outing.

An evaluation of the fall hay fever resorts has been made which allows any hay fever candidate to choose his spot. This is done by exposing plates with a thin layer of agar jelly on the bottom to the air so as to estimate the amount of pollen present from day to day. From this, the concentration of pollen through the season in any given place, and the number of days the pollen is present during the season, can be charted.

The places where no ragweed pollen fell at all—which had no hay fever days during the season—were Phoenix, Ariz.; Sacramento and Los Angeles in California; Jacksonville and Miami in Florida; Reno, Nev.; Portland, Oreg.; Amarillo and El Paso, Tex.; Seattle and Spokane, Wash.; Father Point, Quebec; Prince Albert, Saskatchewan, and Mexico City.

Places which had ver few hay fever days where (the figures in parentheses after the city's name indicate the number of days): Boise, Idaho (3); Bar Harbor, Me. (5), and Maine generally about the same; Isle Royal, Mich. (1); Sault Ste. Marie, Mich. (5); Tower, Minn. (4); Biloxi, Miss. (4); Miles City, Mont. (2); Bethlehem, N. H. (3); Roswell, N. Mex. (2); Lake Placid and Saranac Lake, N. Y. (3); Mobidge, S. Dak. (7); Knoxville, Tenn. (8); Salt Lake City, Utah (1); Eagle River, Wis. (8); all parts of Ontario (3 to 8.)

The plague spots for hay fever are Peoria, Springfield, Ill.; Indianapolis, Wichita, Kansas City, St. Louis, Omaha, Buffalo, Toledo, Dallas and Milwaukee.

Peoria, for instance, has 38 days of hay fever, a maximum atmospheric contamination of 1,117, and average seasonal total of 12,773. Compare with New York, which shows a 20-day season, a maximum atmospheric contamination of 254, and an average seasonal total of 1,575. The New Yorker sensitive to ragweed pollen has about five to ten times as easy a time as his fellow sufferer in Peoria. Other figures show St. Louis with a 36-day season, a maximum of 1,625 and an average seasonal total of 8,225. Boston has a 10-day season, a maximum of 140, and an average seasonal total of 790.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, June 27.

BLONDE, handsome Anna Roosevelt Boettiger snipped a chapter from her mama's book and held a press conference for us New York newspaper gals. We all turned up, happy to see Anna, in the Park avenue apartment of June Rhodes. Against a cream background, the fair Anna, in a bright coral Chinese damask dress, with her gay blue eyes, made a splashy picture.

ALICE HUGHES.

Anna is a newspaper gal herself nowadays. She has taken over the woman's page problems on the Seattle sheet on which her husband is managing editor. Her particular province is the homemakers' department, and she confesses herself involved in cake-baking contests, children's problems and such. She finds Seattle an exciting town, but she fears her knowledge of bridge playing fails to make the social grade. Even among the wealthy families, the women, she says, still take pride in baking their own cakes and overseeing the running of their homes.

Naturally, a number of the press girls compared Anna with her mother, finding her, of course, prettier, but lacking the all-around qualities of Mrs. F. D. R. Nor will she ever possess them to the degree that Eleanor Roosevelt has them was the consensus. Anna is too pretty, has gotten everything in life too easily; whereas her mother, knowing the tragedy of being a plain woman, acquired a broad, sympathetic understanding. Moreover, a plain girl growing up, unmolested by beaux, has plenty of time to work things out in her mind. Anna never had time hanging on her hands. Too pretty.

The reason only the rich can indulge in smoked turkey to eat is because in the smoking the bird shrinks to just half its former weight. And turkey at twice the price is expensive. But it's a new taste in foods, and the knowledge of its preparation is known to only two men in New York—one who makes a business of it; the other, the son of the former chef for Kaiser Wilhelm, who handed down the Hohenzollern smoked turkey secret to this one son. I had some at a party for Marion Davies, who is summering in New York. I noticed most of the guests deserted the cold ham and roast beef for the newer smoked turkey.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN.

One of the few "little women" who really enjoys being little is Lily Pons. She definitely thinks it is an asset for a woman to be petite. Not for her, then, the stretching racks I saw not long ago in a local beauty factory, where women go and pay for being stretched and lengthened. They say they can add from 1 to 2 inches in height. Maybe so, but it still seems like Chinese torture to me.

* * * *

The elegant Dianne Vreeland, of fashion magazine fame, departed for Europe with her baggage full of beige slacks. She wears nothing but slacks on board ship, and took no other clothes save the suit she wore, because she expects to buy them all in Paris.

* * * *

Two newspaper gals we saw develop from downright skinny to fairly portly are Fannie Fern Fitzwater and Prunella Wood. Fannie, after a dozen years as fashion editor of the New York Herald-Tribune, is deserting the written word for the spoken one, and will become a radio personality.

* * * *

One of the guests at a recent house party at Pola Stout's, whose husband writes the Nero Wolfe detective yarns, created fun all the week-end with a complaint book gift she presented to the hostess. In it, each guest wrote down everything that displeased. These were read aloud over meals, and brought millions of laughs.

* * * *

The popular note at the seashore is slacks or a beer jacket made of faded blue denim. Both the faded look and the use of denim are of California origin. I find myself up against that State as a fashion source, more and more. Not especially Hollywood, mind you, but San Francisco and particularly Palm Springs, where sports styles start and sweep the country. Only yesterday Mary Lewis, this town's top-notch fashion merchandiser, said that a California label on a dress has as much selling power as a Chanel Paris import label had in 1926.

Wait till you see the new fall hats. You'll die laughing. They're louder and funnier than ever. They're still rolling upward, off the head. They combine unbelievable colors. They're not even becoming, but they're "but definitely smart!"

The GENTLER SEX

By Malvina Lindsay.

Swim Party.

"Honestly, you never know what funny shapes a bunch of women have until you see them in bathing suits. Now look at Louise Bish, over there. Would you EVER have thought she was built that way from the waist down?"

"Never! You know if it was me I wouldn't have the nerve to put on a bathing suit. I may not be any Venus in mine but at least I try to keep out of the limelight."

"Me, too. Say, aren't you going in?"

"Not yet. I want to stretch out and get a little more sun. Oh I WISH you would look at Nan Birdsong showing herself off on that diving board! Why on earth doesn't she go ahead and dive? Oh I see! She thinks the photographer is going to take her picture. It's a funny thing about women . . . once they get in bathing suits—"

"Yet you know I don't think there's one woman in a million really looks like anything in a bathing suit. Say, look at Madeline Boober over there with her hair stringing down her back. She never misses a chance to show it off."

"Yes, and Kitty Flick's another. The only reason she doesn't have hers bobbed is so she can let it drip in the pool. Look at her now! Why on earth doesn't she put on a cap?"

"Some man's probably told her she looked like Circe. You know what? Maude Looney wouldn't be bad looking if she didn't have such funny legs."

"She ought to wear a longer beach coat. You know I think skinny women look even worse than fat ones in bathing suits. That's one reason I don't reduce any more."

"Did you ever see anything like those arms on Myrtle Knoop? You'd think she was a wrestler."

"And Nell Waddle! Isn't she a sight in those trunks! You'd think the'd get something with a little more coverage."

"She ought to wear a beach coat—at least when she's out of the water. You know there's not one woman in a million—say! LOOK at Mamie Goode! In that old-fashioned thing with a skirt! Isn't she a scream?"

"I suppose she wants to hide her figure. I wonder why Mabel Tapp isn't going in."

"She's probably too smart to put on a bathing suit."

"How silly! I wouldn't be so vain. I think people who don't put on bathing suits are even more conspicuous than those who do. Everybody knows something's the matter with them."

"Say! Look at Eve Bubble! I never knew she was built so funny. I'd think she could reduce that."

"She ought to keep on her beach coat. Did you ever see anyone as proud of her legs as Marie Swift?"

"Well I guess she figures that's all she's got. Oh I WISH you would look at Gracie Hunt. She's getting ANOTHER man to teach her to swim!"

"You know if I had my life to live over I'd never learn to swim—at least I wouldn't admit it. Look at Sadie Tripe parading around. Why doesn't she go in?"

"Well, I will say this for Sadie—she hasn't any stomach."

"No, but look at the face she's got. Did you EVER in your life see so many women without waistlines?"

"They're all too lumpy—they ought to wear beach coats—say look quick at Dorothy Wiggle! Over there mermaiding around the men."

"She makes me sick. She thinks she's the answer to a life guard's prayer."

"Flo Trotter's another. Look at her! It's the third time she's walked around the pool. That's a good-looking suit, though."

"Too fussy. I go in for comfort."

"Me too. Now when I get a suit I get one to swim in: I may not look like anything in it, but I figure it this way—you don't come to a pool to show off your shape. You come to swim. Say, it's getting terribly sunny here."

"All right, Let's walk around the pool."

"Shall we wear our beach coats?"

"No; let's leave them. I like to get the sun."

Dress of Blue Linen For Wear in Morning

Paris (U.P.).—For morning wear, Schiaparelli makes a one-piece dress of pale blue linen in a coarse, rough weave. It is worn with a jacket of flame-colored linen made with short cap sleeves. The matching hat of blue linen is made halo fashion, to be worn on the back of the head, and is trimmed with a small band of flowers.

Pale green linen in a rough weave is used for a two-piece summer suit, made on strictly tailored lines. The blouse is in rose pink crepe made with a high neck and short sleeves.

Matching Pastels.

New York (A.P.).—Pastel sweater and tweed costumes in matching shades are popular for sports wear. Several shops offer tweeds dyed to match the sweaters. Others match skeins of wool to pastel skirts for the home knitter.

Pleasant HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

MAYBE you can't trip off to the beach for a breeze, just like that, but don't let that stand in the way of you and comfort for the summer months.

Mary T., one of our readers, has the right idea about that. She writes: "We don't have money to burn but we are determined to make our home as attractive as possible during the summer. I selected the dining room for most of the improvements because it is the coolest room in the house. We've had a double window expanded into a French door so we can open the room right into the garden; not such a fancy garden, to tell the truth, but pretty in a tangled over-grown way. Our dining room furniture is colonial mahogany—new, and we're very proud of it. The room itself is large with space enough for an old sofa and two mahogany Windsor rockers and an easy chair besides the dining furniture. We're keeping these because they add such a lot of comfort to the room, but everything had to be freshened.

"The walls were done over in white with light green woodwork and a very pale yellow ceiling. Then we got a green summer grass rug for the floor. The chairs in the dining set we slip-covered in yellow rep. I took away the heavy, dark effect of the furniture. The sofa and easy chair got slip-covers, too, a fabric with green leaves on a white ground—washable and completely shrunk, of course. The Windsor rockers have pads of this same cool-looking cotton print. We used pongee dyed yellow for curtains, making them floor length and to draw back and forth on rings. The pongee hangs beautifully and seems so cool, yet it's bright and fresh looking.

"You've no idea how much we enjoy this room during the dog days . . . it's so simple and seems secluded yet beautiful. In the fall, we'll bring back our old green broadloom rug from the cleaners, and I'm going to have a flat weave mohair for slip-covers on the sofa and easy chair, something in a floral with a coral ground. The dining chairs will doff their slip-covers and keep their regular coral velvet seats and the Windsors will have coral velvet pads to match. That way the walls, woodwork and ceilings can stay the same for the summer and winter, for we expect to go back to the summer rug and summer slip covers every season."

When Crocheted by Hostess, Doilies Add Zest to Dainties

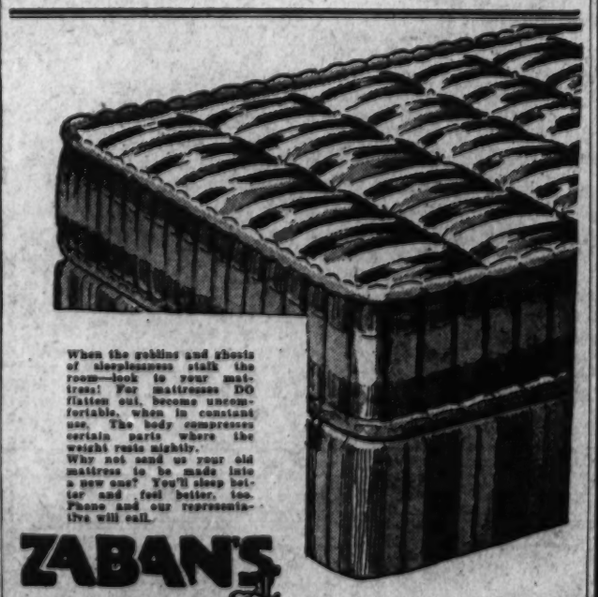
By Alice Brooks.

TWICE as tempting are refreshments served on luxurious doilies, the latter a boon to the hostess who finds she can make these lacy "rounds" herself! Practically indispensable are the three, varied sizes—centerpiece, plate and tumbler size—all of which provide enjoyable and quick crochet. With string, and crochet hook, set to work on a complete set of these, and you'll surely deem it "the smartest thing you ever did!" In pattern 5877 you will find complete instructions for making the doilies shown (they measure 18, 13 and 5½ inches); an illustration of them and of the stitches used; a photograph of a section of a doilie; material requirements.

To obtain this pattern send 10 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred) to The Washington Post, Household Arts Dept., 250 W. 14th St., New York, N. Y. Be sure to write plainly your name, address and pattern number.



When the goblins and ghosts of sleeplessness stalk the room—look to your mattress! For mattresses DO flatten out, become uncomfortable, when in constant use. The body compresses certain parts where the weight rests mightily. Why not send us your old mattress to be made into a new one? You'll sleep better and feel better, too. Phone and our representative will call.

Emblem of Basic Principles

"There can be no true progress without sound basic principles."

(From the book "Standards of Business" by Elwood E. Rice, LL.D.)

FOR generations the historic old Liberty Bell has symbolized the basic principles of our land, proclaiming to all the inspiring message of Freedom, Equality, Justice and Truth. Upon these fundamentals the great American Republic has grown, to a position of leadership among the nations of the world.

Thus sound basic principles, applied by men of character and vision, bring an inevitable reward. In business, in finance, and in government, they make for progress, permanence and success.

For many years the Emblem of the Rice Leaders of the World Association has symbolized and proclaimed the basic principles of its members—successful, progressive, far-sighted manufacturers, each in a different industry, but all adhering steadfastly to the following high standards.

Qualifications for Membership:

HONOR:	A recognized reputation for fair and honorable business dealings.
QUALITY:	An honest product, of quality truthfully represented.
STRENGTH:	A responsible and substantial financial standing.
SERVICE:	A reeognized reputation for conducting business in prompt and efficient manner.

Bob Burns Says:

The greatest thing a man can have is the comfortin' influence of a good wife, but when a wife gets excited about somethin', it's mighty nice to have a husband that can comfort her with his calm reasoning.

My Aunt Dutty was a high-strung, sensitive woman and use'ta worry so much about what people said about her. One night when Uncle Beany came home, he found Aunt Dutty pacin' the floor, almost in hysterics, and Uncle Beany says, "What in the world is the matter now?" and Aunt Dutty said, "I just heard that the lady next door said that I was a brainless chatterbox!"

Uncle Beany says, "Well, now, don't you pay any attention to anything that woman says—she is just a parrot—she only repeats what everybody else in town says."

Stamps

William M. Stuart, The Post's stamp authority, has contended long that those stamp collectors in the various Government departments ought to come out of hiding. He contends there are dozens of first-rate collectors in the service and he, like this column, has been mindful of how quiet they keep.

Some of them, of course, attend stamp club meetings and otherwise take an outward interest, but of scores of them nothing ever is heard. Stuart, in the following paragraphs, speaks of some of the Federal collectors he knows:

"There are many stamp collectors among the officials as well as employes of the Postoffice Department. Yet, there are those among the clerks ad carriers as well as officials who say that they are not collectors for the simple reason that the daily handling and seeing postage stamps is sufficient. Even Postmaster General Farley is conscious of the stamp collecting art for he is fairly flooded with first-day covers from every scene of a new issue.

"Karl A. Crowley, solicitor of the department, has an excellent collection of United States stamps. Crowley knows his stamps and collects accordingly. His albums contain not only all of the issues since 1847, but he has varieties, plate blocks and all the fine issues as a real specialist collects. Then he has a collection of precancels that is most remarkable, especially the Harding varieties.

"Another collector who has albums of worth-while stamps is Comptroller William L. Slattery. He has a collection of not only United States but foreign stamps, his varieties of Persia being unusual and complete. Slattery has spent many years abroad and collected stamps in many foreign lands. His series of addresses to stamp clubs here and in other cities are notable for their historical significance.

"And there are many other notable collectors.

"The philatelic exhibition room now is greatly enlarged. It is on the sixth floor of the new Postoffice Department Building a few doors from the philatelic agency. Mrs. Alice Carruthers is in charge and is assisted by Mrs. Virginia Brizendine. Both of these young women are thoroughly interested in stamps and can be relied upon to give the inquirer accurate information. The new cases are filled with not only United States but the recent issues of foreign stamps that are now received direct from abroad.

"The entire sheets of United States stamps are viewed by many scores of collectors daily. The stamps are attractively arranged and a visit to the exhibition room will demonstrate that in spite of all arguments to the contrary the United States stamps are handsome and made as nearly perfect as it is possible to make such material. The record book of the first stamps distributed July 1, 1847 also is on exhibition and a most interesting volume it is, too.

"Henry A. McBride, assistant to the Secretary of State, is a most enthusiastic stamp collector. He is seen at the meetings of the Collectors Club, Branch 5, Society of Philatelic Americans, and keeps right up to date on new issues."

Again the mails go through: A letter has been delivered to Miss Delphine Brune, 1503 House Office Building, that was mailed in Pasadena, Calif., on December 14, 1936, at 9 p. m. The delay of the letter, which was sent by airmail, was caused by the crash of a Western Air Express plane. But the letter came out, intact, and after so long a time reached its destination.

Miss Adelaide R. Trent, of Lee Heights, Arlington, has been appointed by Gov. George C. Peery of Virginia as a delegate to the eleventh session of the Institute of Public Affairs to be held at the University of Virginia July 4-17. Miss Trent is a member of the International Committee of the World Federation of Education Associations, an offspring of the National Education Association. She was a delegate to the meeting in Edinburgh in 1925 and Geneva, 1929.

His Hobby Is Carving Birds From Wood

Harris & Ewing.

ELLIS MILLER,

a mechanic, of 1815 Riggs place northwest, has become an expert at whittling birds from wood. His hobby was born when he decided to make his own monopoly set. Eventually he carved a duck, liked it and then checked authentic bird pictures so that his later creations are accurate in all details.

Auto Collisions Kill 2, Hurt 5 Over Week-End

Silver Spring Driver Dies as Car Hits Truck; D. C. Woman Dead.

Two persons were killed and five injured, one critically, in week-end automobile accidents on nearby Virginia and Maryland highways.

Andrew T. Jackson, 25, colored, of Silver Spring, Md., was killed instantly Sunday morning when his automobile crashed into a truckload of cattle on the Baltimore boulevard near Contee, Md.

John Sisk, of Elkwood, Va., operator of the truck, was released on bond, to appear tonight at the inquest at Laurel, Md.

Mrs. Ella Frances Corder, 41, of 1207 Potomac avenue southeast, died Saturday night after the automobile in which she was riding with Floyd Carroll, 60, of 1720 P street northwest, collided with another car on Highway No. 1, near Dumfries, Va.

Carroll, a World War veteran, suffered chest injuries, a fractured jaw and many cuts and bruises. Doctors at the hospital at Quantico Marine base, where he was treated, said he had slight chance of recovery. He was transferred Sunday to the U. S. Veterans Hospital in the District.

The car with which Carroll collided had three colored occupants. State police held the driver, John T. Kendall, of Dumfries, on a technical charge pending hearing by a coroner's jury. He was injured slightly, as were the other two occupants, Martha Cole and Charles Thomas, both of Dumfries.

Frank Hogue, 35, of 1731 N street northwest, was brought to Georgetown Hospital Sunday for treatment of cuts and bruises received in an automobile accident on Ridge road in Arlington, Va. His condition was described as not injurious.

12 Boys Wanted For Capitol Show

In honor of the thousands of Scouts who will arrive here for the internationl Jamboree, Loew's Capitol Theater is planning an elaborate production number for the new program starting Friday.

In connection with this "Salute to the Scouts," Manager Gene Ford wants immediately to communicate with 12 local boys, 18 years of age or over, to participate in a "marching" sequence in the overture These marching candidates need not have voice or talents, for all Mr. Ford wants is a group of clean-cut-looking youngsters.

Those who wish to apply for this engagement are requested to report to Assistant Manager George Peters at any time Tuesday, except between the hours of 2 and 5 in the afternoon.

Unemployed Man Amuses Self By Carving Collection of Birds

Makes and Paints Models of Basswood, to Scale; Is Cabinet Maker, Mechanic; Wishes He Could Find a Job.

When monopoly was the rage, around two years ago (remember?), Ellis Miller, 26-year-old Washington mechanic, 1815 Riggs place northwest, decided he would improve on the game somewhat by making his own set and carving his own specially designed tokens. One of the tokens, he decreed, would be a bird.

There are people who could have carved one bird and let it go at that, but not Miller. He had been collecting bird eggs ever since he could remember and his grandfather had collected them a half century before he was born. When he stumbled onto bird carving he realized he had found himself a hobby that would enhance this family tradition, and be a considerable amount of fun.

The collection of carved birds he has made for himself since that time is not large, but it makes up in accuracy what it lacks in quantity. Each bird is scaled, carved carefully, and painted with water colors. The first bird was without legs, the small neck being considered difficult enough.

The second bird had legs and the third was perched on a thistle's bloom. Today Miller has birds in groups, birds with nests nearby, water birds, land birds and pheasants. All are carved from basswood, which he obtains from his old home, near Scranton, Pa.

In the collection, too, is a diorama bird display which he made not many months ago when the Government advertised for someone who could make dioramas for museum purposes.

"My education did not measure up and I had no experience, but I think the diorama was okay. I don't know what good it does me to be able to make a diorama, though; just as I don't know that it makes any difference that I can carve birds.

"I can do plenty of other things, but yet I can't find a steady job. I papered this room. I'm pretty good at cabinet making. I'm doing some carpenter work for the landlady, and I'm a mechanic. But there doesn't seem to be a job for me."

Rev. Marshall Coming Here From Atlanta

Presbyterian Pastor Accepts Call of D. C. Church.

The Rev. Peter Marshall, a young and popular Atlanta, Ga., clergyman, will be the new minister of New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, one of the largest and most historic parishes in the Capital.

The unanimous choice of members of the church council, Mr. Marshall announced his acceptance of the call yesterday through the Rev. Albert Evans, minister now in charge of the church. Mr. Evans told the congregation at morning services that the new minister will arrive here October 1 to assumue duties.

Mr. Marshall's appointment fills a 14-month vacancy, during which the officers of the local church made a Nation-wide search for a successor to Dr. Joseph R. Sizoo, who resigned the pastorate in April 1926, to became minister of the Collegiate Church of St. Nicholas in New York.

Going Abroad.

Frank E. Edgington, chairman of the church's pulpit supply committee, said yesterday that Mr. Marshall announced his decision to accept the call last week when he and Mrs. Marshall stopped here on their way to Scotland. The Marshalls will be away on vacation for several weeks, during which time Mr. Marshall will visit his mother in Glasgow, the city of his birth.

Mr. Marshall, who is 36 years old, is already a prominent member of the Presbyterian clergy, despite the fact that he came to this country a few years ago to pursue a professional career, not as a minister, but as an engineer.

He attended Coatbridge School of Technology in Scotland, and received a bachelor of science degree in engineering from that school. He came to the United States shortly afterward to get a job.

After he arrived, however, he turned to the ministry as the profession of his choice, and with the aid of friends, matriculated at the Columbia Theological Seminary in Decatur, Ga. Graduating with highest honors, he at once began serving a parish in a small Georgia town. Four years ago he accepted a call to the Westminister Presbyterian Church, in Atlanta. He has been pastor there since, his ministry being attended by substantial growth in membership and expansion of activity in the church.

Young People's Church.

He was chosen for the important post here, not only because of his outstanding ability as a preacher, but because of his interest in young people and youth problems. New York Avenue Church has a large young people's following, and stresses youth work in its program.

The invitation which Mr. Marshall last week accepted was the second extended him by the Washington church. Nearly six months ago, after Mr. Marshall had filled the local pulpit as guest preacher on two occasions, he was asked by the pulpit supply committee to come here. He declined then, however, saying that he felt his work in Atlanta was not yet completed.

Mr. Marshall was married last autumn to Miss Sarah Katherine Wood, of Keyser, W. Va.

Navy Yard Worker, Knifed When Wife Was Slain, Better

As the condition of James W. Morris, Washington Navy Yard worker, became slightly improved, police in Prince Frederick, Md., last night were hopeful he will soon recover sufficiently to aid them in the inquest against Wilson Jones, jr., whom they have charged with the knife murder of Morris' wife Friday night.

Morris, who was seriously wounded while trying to aid his wife, Mrs. Margaret Morris, is in Prince Frederick Hospital.

The wounded man gained strength yesterday following a blood transfusion, and talked for a short time with his brother-in-law, G. B. Perkins, of Crew Va., who went to Prince Frederick to arrange for the disposition of Mrs. Morris' body. The body was removed from an undertaking establishment in Mutual, Md., yesterday morning, and taken to Crew for burial.

neck and in the struggle to free himself his sister sank.

Bealle swam about in the water where he had last seen his sister for over an hour before swimming the three-quarters of a mile to shore.

Miss Dorsey, meanwhile, had started to row ashore in the boat. Exhausted, she collapsed while asking persons on the shore for aid.

Coast Guard headquarters in Washington was asked last night to send a cutter to the scene from Norfolk to aid in the search for the bodies.

Lloyd has been employed at the National Training School at 2813 Bladensburg road northeast for 28 years. He was in charge of the school garden and of a cottage of 50 boys. School officials last night were shocked at news of his death.

A native of Maryland, Lloyd owned a cottage at Shadyside on the Potomac where he frequently entertained friends on week-end fishing parties. He is survived by two brothers, Clarence H. Lloyd, of Rock Point, Md., and Eugene Lloyd, of Wayside, and two sisters, Mrs. Christine Middleton, of Wayside, and Mrs. Julian De Court, of Baltimore.

Mrs. Bechhold was the divorced wife of Lewis Bechhold, Cleveland, formerly attached to the Naval Hospital in Washington. She is survived by her mother, Mrs. G. M. Betz; two brothers, Jack and Raymond Bealle, and two sisters, Mrs. Katherine Hamilton and Mrs. G. E. Duffy, all of Washington.

MRS. ELIZABETH B. BECHHOLD.

Miss Dorsey, a cashier at the Hecht Co., was under a physician's care at Morgantown last night for shock and the effects of exposure.

Session Opened At Catholic U. By High Mass

"Where else can the solidarity for Christ be found that will make this Nation peaceful and truly great than in gatherings like this before the Altar of God?" the Right Rev. Joseph M. Corrigan, rector of Catholic University, asked students of the twenty-seventh annual summer session at the high mass marking its formal opening yesterday in the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception of the university campus.

The mass was celebrated by the Rev. James J. Brennan, S. S., a summer session chaplain.

Enrollment figures indicate that the present summer session will be the largest in the history of the University. Registration began Friday and will continue through Monday. The enrollment Saturday evening had reached a total of 1,226 as compared to 1,113 on the corresponding date in 1936.

Lectures begin in all schools and departments of the university this morning and will continue through August 7.

A total of 376 courses will be offered by 34 departments, and instruction will be given by a faculty of 84 members of the regular staff of the university supplement by 56 visiting instructors. The largest offering is in the department of education with 46 courses.

Medals Given To Choir Boys At Cathedral

Boys who had contributed outstanding service to the boys' choir at Washington Cathedral during the last year were honored with awards made at the celebration of Holy Communion yesterday morning in the Cathedral's great choir.

In behalf of the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, the Very Rev. Noble C. Powell, D. D., dean of the Cathedral, conferred awards as follows:

Louis Hood, jr., 6316 Maple avenue, Chevy Chase, Md., the Mount St. Alban medal for highest musical ability; Alexander Walker, 2401 Calvert street, the Cover medal for character and deportment; Burr Piggott, 2710 Thirty-sixth place (absent because of illness), the Lane-Johnston medal for loyalty, efficiency and devotion to the choir.

Walker was also appointed second Crucifier for the coming year. Robert G. Barrow, organist and choirmaster of the Cahtedral, presented the youths for the honors.

The singing boys receive day scholarships in St. Albans, the National Cathedral School for Boys, and hold daily rehearsals. They sing at principal Sunday services.

Public Eager To Be Heard On Tax Plans

Groups and Individuals Ask to Testify; Hearings Open Today.

With numerous groups and individuals clamoring for a place on the program, the Senate District Committee this morning will open a public hearing on the omnibus tax bill for the District.

Senator King, Democrat, of Utah, chairman of the committee, last night had arrived at no schedule of the order in which the groups would be heard—or just how many could be welcomed, if the testimony is to be closed Wednesday as planned.

He announced, however, that the hearing will be opened at 10 a. m. with an "explanation" by Representative Kennedy, of Maryland, chairman of the House sub-committee which presented the bill in its original form.

"Mr. Kennedy will explain the bill as it is now and as it was before it was changed and amended, and explain reasons for the changes," he said.

150 Complaints Received.

More than 150 letters and telegrams of protest against the bill as it now stands have poured into Senator King's office, a majority of them attacking the proposed chain store tax, with the business privilege tax ranking second in disfavor.

Several "complainers" suggested a sales tax as an emergency alternative.

The Federation of Citizens' Associations Saturday night in an emergency session voted to ask a 2 per cent retail sales tax—provided food, medicines and cheaper grades of clothing are exempted.

Thomas E. Lodge, president, and L. A. Carruthers, chairman of the fiscal relations committee of the federation, will represent the organization at the public hearing. Neither knew last night, however, just when they would come on the program.

King Favors Inquiry.

K. P. Armstrong, of the Burroughs Citizens' Association, who led a fight against the federation approving the sales tax "or any other sort of tax under the present circumstances," has also asked to be heard.

Senator King has said that after the emergency tax measure is put through he favors a thorough study of the whole District tax situation. He said authority for such a survey could be added to the tax bill.

Both Ferrells and Buddy Myer Picked to Play in All-Star Game Here July 7

SAME OLD STORY: CHISOX WIN OVER NATS AGAIN, 5 TO 3

SPORTS — The Washington Post — SPORTS

14 WASHINGTON: MONDAY, JUNE 28, 1937 X ****

Stone Left Out of List; 5 Are Yanks

ringer, have been members of every American League squad since the all-star game was inaugurated in 1933 at Chicago. Nine others, Grove, Cramer, Cronin, Harder, Averill, the Ferrell brothers, Myer and DiMaggio, have seen action in baseball's midsummer event. The remaining nine rank as "rookies" in this kind of baseball warfare.

4 Right-Handers, 2 Portsiders.

In collecting a force for making the junior circuit's bid to resume domination over the older league, interrupted for the only time last year when the Nationals won, 4 to 3, at Boston, McCarthy will have at his disposal four right-handed hurlers, Harder, Wes Ferrell, Bridges and Stratton. Grove and Gomez will take care of the southpaw pitching. There may be arguments over the absence of Detroit's Roxie Lawson, Red Ruffing and Monte Pearson of the Yankees, or Buck Newsom, of Boston, among others.

In the catching department, all three nominees are batting around .290. Although a member of each of the four previous squads, Dickey did not work at Chicago in 1933 or at Cleveland in 1935. Rick Ferrell caught the whole 1933 game in which Babe Ruth's homer gave the Americans a 4-to-2 triumph. Sewell's handling of pitchers has been given a big share of the credit in the White Sox's rise in fortunes, so there appears to be little argument over the selections.

Gehrig, leading the league in batting with an average around .390, rates first choice for first base, although Greenberg is the head man in home runs, batting in runs and scoring, along with hitting .350. Foxx, a first baseman by trade, never has played that position in the all-star game, but has operated as a third baseman in three games. There will be plenty of competition for the third base post, however, with Clift and Rolfe on the job, and Foxx may watch the game as he did in 1933.

Myer May Play Second.

Gehringer, still the league's top second baseman, has said he would rather not play because of an injury, which may give Myer, the 1935 league batting champion, employment. Cronin, having one of his biggest seasons at bat with a .350 mark, is the only shortstop listed, McCarthy and the other managers having passed up Luke Appling of the White Sox, the major league batting champion last year. Which may be used for argument purposes.

Clift, batting better than .300, apparently has an edge over Rolfe with his .270-odd average.

The outfielders' list includes three right-handed batters, Bell, DiMaggio and Walker, and three left-handed sluggers, Averill, Cramer and Moses. None, however, is a leftfielder by trade, Averill, Cramer and DiMaggio operating in center and the other trio in right. All are .300 or better hitters, with Walker and Bell boasting better than .350 marks.

A notable absentee will be Ben Chapman, of Boston, who played in each of the previous games. As befits their position as champions of the baseball world, the Yankees have 5 men on the squad of 23, with Detroit and Boston runners-up at 4 each. Washington has 3, Chicago, Cleveland and St. Louis 2 each, and Philadelphia 1, giving every club representation.

Light-Heavyweight Champion Meets Reddish in Ball Park

By Bob Garrison.

Washington's first view of Light-Heavyweight Champion John Henry Lewis will be the occasion for the local townfolk to turn out at Griffith Stadium tonight for Turner's weekly fight show.

Lewis, dominant ruler of the light-heavies, will meet Willie Reddish, husky Philadelphia heavyweight, in the 10-round feature of the show which also included Ray Ingram, eighth ranking featherweight, and Ossie Stewart.

Considered by many to be a superior fighter to Joe Louis, heavyweight champ, Lewis is said to have consented to meet Reddish, to whom he will give away 12 pounds, because he is anxious to get a few heavyweight scraps under his belt before stepping into the ring with the Bomber.

His career as champion has been an active one, and for being so active and displaying such marked superiority over his opponents, he was declared by experts to be the number one fighter of the fight world for 1936. Barney Ross held the honor in 1935.

Reddish, a former stevedore, was A. A. U. champion of Philadelphia, where he has lived and performed since he moved there from Camden, his birthplace.

He has held Leroy Haynes to a draw, defeated Eddie Simms, whom he had on the floor four times, Obi Walker and Terry Mitchell.

Ingram, will be making a comeback after his sudden knockout on the police card at the hands of Joey Archibald, who stopped Nick Jerome last week. He meets Cristobal Jarmillo, Puerto Rican champion, in an eight-round semiwindup.

Ossie Stewart, Pittsburgh middleweight, who has won six straight local fights, five by knockouts, meets Leo Duncan, of Philadelphia. Freddie Wilson, Lewis' stablemate, meets Tiger Smith, of Baltimore, and George Abrams, local middleweight, who has won his last three fights by knockouts, opens the card at 8:30 against Tony Livingstone, of Quantico.

Capital League 1st-Half Honors Won by Pepco

Pepco clinched first half honors in the National Capital League, defeating Chestnut Farms and Dairy last Thursday. The victory gave the strong Pepco nine a creditable record of ten wins and two losses. Chestnut and Peoples Drug Store are tied for second place with seven wins and six defeats. Each has two more contests scheduled before the first half draws to a close and an undisputed runner-up may emerge.

The second-half play begins on Thursday when Chestnut meets Peoples on the Gonzaga diamond.

A much closer race is anticipated in the final half by Secretary George Ashby, who reports every team strengthened and especially Washington Gas Light Co. and Thompson's, who finished fourth and last, respectively, last half. Every nine is expected to be fighting for the top.

New Jockey Scoring At Cumberland Track

Cumberland, Md., June 27.—The Cumberland Fair Association has announced that a new scoring system will be in effect during the ten-day race meeting August 10 to 14 and 17 to 21, when jockeys will compete for the handsome gold watch offered annually.

Heretofore, only the jockey with the most firsts received the prize. This year, first place will count 5 points, with 2 and 1 points going to boys finishing second, third and fourth. Eddie Smith, of Washington, won the watch last fall.

Variety Club Honors Steele At Luncheon

Middleweight Champ Due to Start Serious Work After Fete.

World Middleweight Champion Freddie Steele will take one more fling at the softer life today before beginning rigorous training for his bout against Charles (Hobo) Williams at Griffith Stadium July 20.

Steele will be guest of honor at a luncheon given by the Variety Club, which is promoting the outstanding fistic attraction sponsored by The Washington Post. Freddie will do a bit of road work in the morning before the luncheon and immediately after the social function will retire to his training camp at Griffith Farms to settle down to serious business.

Williams has been training for about two weeks at the Eleventh Street Gymnasium in which he always whips himself into shape for local fights. Because he was so satisfied with that arrangement, Williams flatly refused to move into a regular outdoor training camp which had been set up for him.

Steele is the first world's champion to report for training in the Capital more than one week ahead of a scheduled bout. His manager, Dave Miller, explained his presence here so far ahead of the bout in the following words:

"One cannot underestimate the possibilities of a defeat at the hands of such a fighter as Williams," he said. "Neither can one tell what will happen to a fighter from the Coast who does not allow himself time to become acclimated to the East. Out of deference to both the climate and the fighter we are facing, we have brought Freddie here a month ahead of time. If he loses, it will not be because he is not in shape."

Don Schumacher Wins Trans-Mississippi Title

Denver, June 27 (AP).—Courageous, poker-faced Don Schumacher, Dallas, won the trans-Mississippi golf championship today with one of the finest finishes in the history of the tournament.

The 21-year-old Texan beat gallant Eddie Held, St. Louis veteran and twice former champion, 1 up. Lagging most of the match, Schumacher whipped a perfect iron shot to within three feet of the flag on the 456-yard thirty-sixth hole of the Cherry Hills course and sank the putt for a birdie 4 and the title.

Schumacher's courage and sparkling golf under pressure made him the favorite with the spectators, who watched with growing excitement as the "kid" shotsmith whittled away a five-hole lead run up by the 34-year-old Held.

Tigers Bow To Yankees By 9-5 Count

Selkirk Gets a Homer, Triple, Two Singles to Help Cause.

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 27.—Led off by Twinkletoes Selkirk, the former wrestler with the big bat, the Yankees took Detroit pitching apart today and walloped the Tigers, 9 to 5, with a 17-hit attack.

Selkirk socked his sixteenth homer, a triple and two singles, driving in four runs to set the pace that dropped the Tigers a notch, strengthened the Yankees' hold on first place and gave Murderers' Row a record of nine wins and three setbacks in their just ended home stay.

The Yanks didn't need much pitching, and didn't get any to speak of, although Johnny Murphy, who relieved old Blubber Malone in the fifth, checked the Detroit bats effectively with two hits in the five innings he worked to take credit for the win.

But there was even less of the Tiger pitching in sight. Roxie Lawson, the league's leading thrower, lasted less than three innings and gave up seven hits to lose the decision. Poof Poffenberger and old Jack Russell finished up.

Selkirk, by driving in four runs, was the Yankees' big gun, but Red Rolfe and Tony Lazzeri kept pace with him by also collecting four hits apiece.

The Tigers had one big inning, the fourth, when three singles, a walk and George Tebbetts' three-bagger, brought in four runs. Billy Rogell hit a homer in the fifth for the odd run.

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., June 27 (AP).—Princeton clinched the national collegiate outboard motorboat championship on Saratoga Lake today as Jimmy Mullen won the first heat of the handicap race, final event on the program.

The victory assured Mullen of the individual college crown, since he amassed all of Princeton's points in two days of racing.

Mullen's triumph climaxed a series of performances in which he swept all Class C competition with a world record-breaking race, and scored additional points today in the Class B events.

Bob Rowland, of William and Mary, was second to Mullen in the handicap opener, with Art Wullschwegler, of Cornell, third.

Jack Hayes, Bonura Hit Home Runs

Ted Lyons Holds Nats Scoreless Till Seventh.

By Shirley Povich.

Griffith Stadium, June 27.

Sports Editor of The Post—

Dear Boss: Sorry, there was no news to report here today. Nothing unusual happened. The Nats simply took another licking from the White Sox. Thus the dog is still biting the man. If you know what I mean.

It's getting to be a foregone conclusion whenever the teams meet. The Nats raise a lot of false hopes and the White Sox win the ball game. Just to refresh your memory, that has happened to the Nats 10 times in 13 starts against the Chicago mob this season.

Twelve thousand fans saw the Washingtons lose today. The score, which doesn't make much difference, was 5 to 3. The White Sox sent old Ted Lyons out there to the pitching mound and he made a dispirited gang of Nats roll over and play dead for the third time this season.

Zeke Bonura hit a home run. So did Jackie Hayes. With those two belts against Jimmy DeShong, the Sox scored as many runs as the Nats were able to get all day against the venerable Lyons. They ran up a 5-0 lead and then coasted to their third straight victory over the Washingtons.

At that, though, there was a wee bit of news. It materialized in the ninth inning when, with the game seemingly hopelessly lost, Manager Bucky Harris unveiled his kid pitcher, Bucky Jacobs, the lad who threw three no-hit games down in the Virginia College league this spring.

It was a tolerable big league debut for young Jacobs. The skinny kid didn't allow a hit in his one inning of toil, although he put a pair on base with walks. There were actually four outs in the inning—Hayes, who grounded into the pitcher's box; Sewell and Lyons, who lifted tame flies to Almada and Jacobs' shirt tail which was out all during the inning.

The Washingtons were a helpless crew against the ancient Lyons while the Sox were rolling up their 5-0 lead in the first five innings. The Lyons' share of the proceedings during that time was a two-hit performance he was flinging at the Nats.

Chicago didn't tarry with Jimmy DeShong. They smacked out three hits in the first inning—singles by Radcliffe, Appling and Hayes—and came up with two runs after DeShong had helped them along by hitting big Zeke Bonura with a pitched ball.

They got their third run very simply. Zeke Bonura simply smacked DeShong's first pitch of the third inning into the leftfield bleacher seats and they had it.

Those two runs the Sox scored in the fifth weren't very complicated, either. Dixie Walker whacked a single to center and Hayes thumped a long fly to the deepest corner of centerfield for an inside-the-park homer on which he crossed the plate erect.

All the Nats had to show for their work against Lyons in the first five innings were a single by Buddy Lewis in the first and another by DeShong in the third. They got a run in the seventh when Stone whammed a three-bagger to center, but muffed a chance for a big inning when Rick Ferrell hit into a double play with a pair of colleagues on base.

They muffed a scoring chance, too, in the eighth, after Pinch Hitter Wes Ferrell and Mel Almada began the session with a pair of singles. But the thing fizzled when Lewis forced Almada at second and Kuhel hit into one of those first-to-second-to-first double plays. Incidentally, the Sox came up with five double plays against the Nats during the afternoon, which explains a lot.

In the ninth, the Nats rang a loud false alarm when Sington and Travis singled with one out. Buddy Myer provided the second out with a long fly that scored Sington from third, and Rick Ferrell drove Travis home with a single to center, but the Nats were still three runs shy after Pinch Hitter Jess Hill forced Ferrell at second by 40 feet.

Norwalk Man Breaks Canada Casting Mark

Chester, N. S., June 27 (U.P.).—Kenneth Knapp, of Norwalk, Conn., Rod and Gun Club, today broke the Canadian fly-casting record for a 5¾-ounce rod, casting 134 feet and making an average of 129.6 feet in three casts.

He won the Beatty Trophy, presented annually by Sir Edward Beatty, president of the Canadian Pacific Railroad.

Takoma Nine Wins.

The Takoma A. A. yesterday defeated Sandy Springs, 8 to 0, with Al Pratt pitching two-hit ball with seven strikeouts. Askins led the batting attack with two doubles and a single.

CALL CARL

This Morning

Where's Johnny Stone, Mr. Harridge?

By Shirley Povich.

Mr. Will Harridge,
President, American League,
Chicago, Ill.

Dear Sir: Pardon my bluntness, but I think your American League managers have gone daft. Either that or they were in a profound trance when they came up with those selections for the All-Star outfield that will represent your league here at Griffith Stadium a week from next Wednesday against the National Leaguers.

POVICH.

There seems to be enough psycopathic cases among the managers in your league to warrant an official league alienist, even if you have to scrap the publicity bureau to meet the budget. The mental processes by which they arrived at those All-Star outfield selections will forever place 'em under suspicion.

* * * *

Howinell they could take a sane look at the league's outfield talent and then give our Johnny Stone the old heave-ho stumps us. That's what I mean—if they can leave Stone out of that All-Star outfield line-up, the guys who are running your ball clubs are not only something less than mental giants but their I. Q. would represent the zero hour if you added the word hour.

* * * *

If, perchance, they are not mental cases, then they had a heluva nerve leaving Stone off that team. Specially when they unblushingly selected such guys as Earl Averill, of the Indians; Wally Moses, of the Athletics, and Roger Cramer, of the Red Sox.

* * * *

There isn't any quarrel about those other three outfielders they picked among the six who will represent your league. Gerald Walker, of the Tigers; Beau Bell, of the Browns, and Joe DiMaggio, of the Yanks, certainly warrant the honor.

* * * *

But those other three—Averill, Moses and Cramer—if they belong in the All-Star lineup and Johnny Stone doesn't, well, then, Mr. Harridge, just cancel my subscription. Why, they don't even belong in the same breath with the Washington leftfielder.

* * * *

Let us look at the records—ahem! There are only two outfielders in the league who are outhitting our Mr. Stone with his fancy average of .345—Walker and Bell. And, if you investigate further, here's what you find:

* * * *

Mr. Stone outhitting the Indians' Averill by exactly 38 points; Mr. Stone outhitting the Athletics' Moses by 28 points and Mr. Stone outhitting Boston's Cramer by 29 points. And if you think that .345 average of our Mr. Stone is a flash in the pan, then just thumb through the record books and take a gander at that .344 he hit for the full season in 1936.

* * * *

There might even be some excuse for omitting Stone if he was a stumblebum out there in the outfield, but that does not happen to be the case. Because Mr. Stone can not only get over the ground out there in the outfield but he can heave that ball back to the plate with the best of 'em.

* * * *

Not only that, but the real jolt in Stone's case is that all three of the guys he is outhitting by so big a margin are left-handed batters like himself. So they can't excuse the fact that they ignored him by citing those grounds. If they wanted the best left-handed hitting outfielder in the league on their team, then they had to take our Mr. Stone. But apparently they don't need the best left-handed hitting outfielder in the league.

* * * *

And Washington fans have a minor quarrel, too, with your managers' selections for the third base job. How come they picked Red Rolfe, of the Yankees, over our Buddy Lewis? What does a guy have to do in this league to be the best third baseman in it beyond playing like the best third baseman in the league.

* * * *

There must be something magic in those letters spelling "Yankees" which the New York players wear across their chests. Because our Buddy Lewis is not only outhitting the Yankees' Red Rolfe by .298 to .274, but he's at least a stand-off out there around third base. And you can get plenty around these parts that he's a better fielder than Rolfe.

* * * *

However, Mr. Harridge, don't get me wrong. This isn't a 100 per cent squawk. We're willing to skip the rest of the All-Star selections. 'Specially now that they've named Rick and Wes Ferrell and Buddy Myer among 'em. Rick sure did rate a place, but if Wes Ferrell and Myer don't register surprise this morning when they read about it they ought to get a job acting.

Yrs. in sport,
S. L. P.

It's Wes Ferrell vs. Buck Newsom At Griffith Stadium Wednesday

Wes Ferrell vs. Buck Newsom. That will be the pitching program when the Nats and the Red Sox meet at Griffith Stadium on Wednesday—a head-on clash between the two principal figures in the five-player deal between the two clubs three weeks ago.

Clarke C. Griffith, owner of the Nats, arranged the battle of Ferrell and Newsom in a long-distance telephone conversation with Manager Joe Cronin, of the Red Sox, last night. Cronin readily consented to star big Newsom against big Ferrell.

The two right-handers who have had sensational success since changing uniforms have long anticipated the battle. At the time of the trade, Ferrell commented, "I know one thing—I'm a better pitcher than that Buck Newsom." Newsom, of course, has fancied himself as the greatest pitcher in the league ever since he won his first ball game.

"I'll make that Washington club moan when I pitch against 'em," the boastful Newsom said when he learned of the deal that sent him to Boston. "They never did respect me enough around here."

Annapolis Wins Over Brewers, 4-0

Annapolis, Md., June 27.—Annapolis turned tables on the Milwaukee Brewers, of Washington, to whom it lost 4 to 0 some weeks ago, by defeating them here this afternoon by 8 to 0.

Annapolis battered both Murdock and Brown, the former retiring after Annapolis had scored three runs in the third with only one out. Brown had a bad session in the seventh when the Annapolitans scored three on doubles by Rolf and Zahn, Johnson's single and a pass to Myers.

Lucas was touched for five hits in the first two innings when the Phils took the lead, 2-0. Vaughan got one run back in the Pirate second with his homer and Al Todd put them ahead in the fourth, lining out a homer with one on.

Three safe hits gave Pittsburgh another in the fifth to end their scoring.

In the ninth with one run on and two runners on base Lucas forced Pinchhitter Jimmy Wilson to fly to L. Waner ending the game.

A. H. Wilson Scores Double Eagle, Woodmont Downs Suburban Team

Spencer Cup Play Tied at Beaver Dam

Brafield and Candy Tie in President's Cup Play.

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

A. Herman Wilson's double eagle on the par five 15 hole at Washington Golf and Country Club, Woodmont's victory over the invading suburban team, 17½ to 13½, a tie for the Cliff Spencer Scotch foursome trophy at Beaver Dam, and President's Cup at Kenwood featured the local links activities yesterday.

Wilson's deuce on the 446-yard uphill hole was the first double eagle ever scored at the Washington course. He used a spoon for his second shot and the ball hit short of the green and trickled in the cup. It was the second spoon shot of the day to hole out on the Virginia course, D. P. Puxhorn sinking a shot on the par 4 third hole, measuring 450 yards.

The latter feat has been accomplished several times, by Dave Thomson, club pro, and others. M. P. Campbell with a 16 handicap and Pat Cook with a 10 tied for first prize in the match play against par, also at Washington, finishing 5 up.

Other winners included A. G. Desendorf, 13 handicap, 4 up; Sam Smith, 25 handicap, 3 up; Dr. G. R. Huffman, 5 handicap, 3 up, and J. P. Bradley, 16 handicap, 3 up.

Scoring a clean sweep in three foursomes, Woodmont's golfers eked out a 4 point victory over the Suburban Club of Baltimore, despite Ralph Beach's sub-par 67, fashioned from a 35-32, that defeated Gene Larkin, 3 and 2.

Woodmont, 17½; Suburban, 13½.

Ralph Beach (Suburban), defeated Gene Larkin, 3 and 2; Howard Nordlinger and Milton Harris (Woodmont), defeated Robert Goldman and Nathan Kaufman, sr., 2 points to 1; Lou Harris and Gus Ring (Woodmont), defeated Howard Schloss and Stewart Weller, 2 points to 1; Dan Crone, jr., and Morton Rowe (Suburban), defeated Robert Baum and Willard Goldheim, 3 points to 0.

Fulton Brylawski and Andy Schloss (Woodmont), defeated Milton Halle and Marx Kaufman, 3 points to 0; George Hess and Morton Rothschild (Suburban), defeated Gilbert Hahn and Albert Steinem, 3 points to 0; Maurice Goldstein and Dr. Morris Wolfe (Woodmont), defeated Sam Silverstein and L. Nelson, 3 points to 0; Sidney Goodman and David Schwartz (Suburban), defeated Dr. Samuel Bosdonoff and Dave Schwartz, 2 points to 1.

Morris Iseman and Ralph Goldsmith (Woodmont), drew with Malcolm Hecht and Frank Kaufman, 1½ points to 1½; William Ilch and William Slepian (Woodmont), defeated David Weiler and Joseph Grant, 3 points to 0; L. V. Freudberg and Arthur Brode (Woodmont), defeated Dr. Lewis Jacobs and Reuben Ottenheimer, 2 points to 0.

K. A. Brafield and M. T. Candy tied for the President's Cup, at Kenwood, with net 135's. Brafield scored 89-26, 63 and 98-26, 72, while Candy paired rounds of 80 and 79 with a 12 handicap on each round.

R. A. Weaver was third, shooting 74 and 71 minus a 4-stroke handicap. The winners will play off for the trophy next week.

Dr. L. Levine and Miss Bessie Taylor tied with S. T. Dale and Mrs. G. P. Luce for the Cliff Spencer foursome trophy, at Beaver Dam, yesterday with net 69's.

The gross prize was also a tie between Mrs. C. E. Purdy and J. M. Palmer and Mrs. R. C. Mitchell and J. R. Miller. Other prize winners included:

Miss Bessie Taylor and Dr. L. Levine, 93-24—69; Mrs. G. P. Luce and S. T. Dale, 92-23—69; Mrs. R. J. Guch and C. S. Range, 93-21—71; Mrs. C. B. Buck and L. Webster, 100-29—71; Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Red Sox Win Double Bill From Browns

Boston Takes First, 8-0, Win Second Game by 11-7 Score.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, June 27.—Tom Yawkey's gold-plated Red Sox swept both ends of a double-header from the St. Louis Browns today, completing the most successful home stand of the team in years with 11 victories out of 13 games against Western invaders.

Behind the six-hit pitching of Jack Wilson, who chalked up his sixth victory of the season and third in a row, the Sox shut out the Browns, 8 to 0, in the opener and then hammered three St. Louis pitchers for 16 hits to capture the nightcap, 11 to 7.

By winning, the Yawkeymen advanced to within a half gmae of third place and gained a half game on the league-leading New York Yankees, who they trail by four-and-one-half games.

Dettweiler Paces Hoyas At Oakmont

Intercollegiate's Start Today With Locals Rated Chance.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Pittsburgh, Pa., June 27.—Georgetown University's six-man golf team and the representatives of 36 other colleges and universities throughout the country completed practice here tonight for the opening of the thirty-ninth National intercollegiate championships tomorrow at famed Oakmont Country Club, the graveyard of many shattered title hopes.

One hundred and sixty-four of the finest young amateur golfers in the land tee off tomorrow morning in the first round of the 36-hole qualifying tests to determine the collegiate team champion and the 32 places in the match play which gets under way Wednesday.

On the word of blond Bill Dettweiler, No. 1 Georgetown ace, the Hoyas have a chance in the team play tomorrow and Tuesday and stand to place at least four of six representatives in the individual battles opening Wednesday.

Dettweiler played the out nine this afternoon in 36, one under par, and was sailing along sensationally until he encountered the lengthy fifteenth stretch. An 8 on the fifteenth and a 6 on the eighteenth, six strokes over par on these two holes, boosted him to 80 for the round. Maury Nee duplicated this score and Chuck Pettijohn notched an 83. Capt. Jimmy Lee, Harvey Johnson and Frank Donahue weren't that good in their first tour of the championship layout and reported no scores.

Nee leads the Hoyas over the tortuous Hulton Highlands in company with Albin Mailhes, Notre Dame, at 8:55 o'clock tomorrow morning. Lee goes out at 10:35 a. m. with Jim Hurley, of Canisius, and Johnson with Alanson Davis, Stanford, at 11:15 a. m. Donahue and Frank McAleavey, Cornell, go out at 12:35 p. m. Dettweiler is paired with Fred Reimers, of Cornell, in a 12:45 p. m. twosome and Pettijohn plays with Bernard Plante, Canisius, starting at 1:25 p. m.

WITH BILL BENNINGS

DEAR AL, Selections at Charles Town.

Seven more days of racing at the regular meeting here in the mountains. With the completion of next Monday's holiday program, the plant will close for a little more than a week. On July 14 the four-day horse show meeting will hold the stage here and then all action at the track will halt until the first two weeks in December. Before the late fall meeting, it is expected that the infield will be graded and the last of the once-prominent rock pile at the clubhouse turn will be removed. Due to having taken a position elsewhere, Jack Carpenter, "The Voice of Charles Town," will not be heard over the loud speaker system for the remainder of the meeting. Jack has been a busy man at the "mike" and, for a while, it appeared that Jack's purpose was to call every patron's name over the speaker at least once during the meeting. About the only one he missed was Pork Chops. Incidentally, Pork Chops was a prominent figure at Saturday's races. He was dressed in his Sunday best and used a newspaper for a napkin when the pressbox boys provided him with his daily blocks of ice cream. I wish to acknowledge the buck donated by "A friend of Harry Cullen's." I turned the greenback over to the apple man. The a. m. says business still is good and he probably will be able to get by until the horses return late in the year. I want to thank those who have helped this worthy fellow make the grade.

BILL.

First race—Shaggy Ann seems suited by conditions in this short sprint. Needs only to repeat that last effort. Beauty B., with Palumbo to do the riding, is a threat. Plain Ace has early speed and is a possible surprise.

Second race—Double on Sea is on the "also eligible" list and is a doubtful starter. However, this one is too good to overlook. Little Whisk appears best of those assured a chance to start. Jordon Rose is a fair sort.

Third race—Mary Wales has a good race in the books and should she run back to that effort we may cash a bet. By Surprise should be a keen factor. Lady Glasgow has been kidding. Could awake in this company.

Fourth race—Fredalva, blocked last out, could win this with a share of the racing luck. Roquepine's last was a good try. Sea Finn for the show money.

Fifth Race—Stand By is a sharp veteran and looks like the best bet of the day. Wise Money and Peggy Can to take care of the others.

Sixth race—Bungalow appears to be the solid horse in this field. Palumbo will do the riding. Colorist may show much improvement with the change of jockeys. Goldstreak is a threat.

Seventh race—Lucky Turn needs only racing luck to take care of this field. Bengay, with Root to ride, would be the one to beat. Vennie H. is dangerous.

Eighth race (substitute)—If this race is used I'll take Good Gracious, Lady Buck and Johnny Bane.

Best bet—Stand By.

George's Radio Nine Takes Junior League Lead, Beats J. C. Flood 8-6

Star Radio Nine Upset By Cardinals

New Deal Wins, 13 to 6, Over H. D. Leary, Devers Wins.

By Jack Munhall.

Chalk up a decision for National City League over Jupiter Pluvius.

Although the sly old rascal continued to misbehave and waited until midafternoon, most of the scheduled program was completed.

All the midget, junior and B unlimited games were decided. The A division did not fare so well.

What was to have been the feature clash of the day, that between Heurich and Gordon, the first of a three-way play-off which also involves Rose's Liquor, was rained out, as was the game between Anacostia Motors and Union Printers.

In the cofeature, the George's Radio outfit captured undisputed first place in the junior league, handing the erstwhile coleaders, J. C. Flood, a 8-6 defeat in a tense, close battle that was nearly marred by fisticuffs.

A triple by Dave Maloney with the bases loaded in the first inning was the decisive blow. It jumped the winners into a lead which they never relinquished, though a pair of three-run rallies in the seventh and eighth innings threatened to alter the result.

Tempers flared mometnarily in the fourth frame. Leftfielder Hal Leatherwood, of George's, collided with Wallie Merchant, foe second sacker, who was backing up a close play at third base, and trouble was imminent.

New Deal went into the lead of the B Unlimited League, slapping H. B. Leary to the tune of 13-6, while the Star Radio team, sharers of the lead, went down in unexpected defeat before the Cardinals, 4-2.

Ross Moves Up.

New Deal won behind the steady pitching of its star, Devers, who, though he allowed ten hits, was untouchable in the clutches and fanned seven. Rightfielder Borden led the winning attack with two doubles and a single in as many times at the plate.

Steele pitched the Cardinals to their upset victory over tar Radio with James bearing the loss.

An odd triple play, made possible by poor baserunning, which was executed by the victors in the fourth must have recalled memories to Umpire Nau. Nau, who pulled one of baseball's rarities, an unassisted triple play, was working when the Cards cut down three of the enemy.

The play began when Robinson, attempting to reach third base, was out. When E. Plumb also tried to get to that sack he was tagged out by Rodes. A third runner broke for second and was touched out by Bousman. Page the Dodgers!

The Ross Jewelers moved into second place in the B League behind effective twirling by Walter Clubb. Beaver Cooper hit a homer and a trio of singles.

Tn the other B contest the D. C Plumbers continued their upward surge, blasting the 260th Coast Artillery, 9 to 3, as Leamans doled out 4 hits and struck out 15.

The winner slammed out 13 hits, including circuit drives by Sam Robertson, Clark Griffith's nephew, with two on, and Tom Jones.

Thompson Fans Ten.

The Police Boys Clubs, No. 5, juniors edged out Wade, 4 to 2, as Thompson struck out 10 and Reggie Murphy supplied the batting punch with 3 hits.

Police Boys Club No. 5 was awarded a forfeit over Broady's when the latter was unable to muster the necessary nine men.

In the remaining junior game, Stewart's Pharmacy won a brilliant and unexpected triumph over Corr Bicycle, 10 to 4, with an eighth-inning rally.

The winnning outburst was born on Leith's three-bagger nourished on a single by Riley which deadlocked the score at 5 to 5, and was fully matured on a mighty triple by Thompson that sent Riley scurrying over the platter.

Mackie pitched beautiful ball for the losers and probably deserved a better fate. He allowed only eight hits and fanned 17 batters. Riley, who scored the winning run, also starred in the field, handling nine chances without a miscue.

Corr Bows.

In the midget league, George Deoudes maintained its position at the top of the heap swamping Corr Bicycle, 10-4, with Batchelder pitching. He spaced out seven hits and fanned as many.

Police Boys Club 4 replaced Hilltop Market in second place outlasting it 13-12 in a slug-nutty skirmish which had pitchers throwing and ducking while 26 safe blows whistled by. Walsh who received credit for the victory proved he could hit anyhow driving out a circuit smash among three hits.

The Police Boys Club 4 showed no fraternal spirit toward its brother from the Eleventh Precinct and slaughtered it, 10-4, as Davis threw a third one by 15.

Shortstop Eddie Cinotti, of No. 4, was hurt and removed to Casualty Hosptial when struck by an oddly bouncing ball which struck him severely in the eye. The extent of his injury is not known, but it is believed nothing more serious than a badly blackened and bruised orb.

3d Cavalry Beats West Shore Four

Carlisle, Pa., June 27.—In the most brilliant polo performance ever seen in this locality, the National 12-goal champions, the Third Cavalry of Fort Myer, Va., this afternoon at Camp Hill defeated the West Shore Rangers by a score of 14 to 6, the locals starting with a six-goal handicap. Capt. Johnson made an outstandingly brilliant finish to his service with the Third Cavalry Polo Club, going to West Point as Cadet polo instructor next week.

West Shore rallied a strong defense in the last chukker. Today's game was the first Capt. Smith, a two-goal man, had played with the Third Cavalry. Johnson and Hines exhibited back and overhand mallet work of high standard.

Rain Delays Men's Tennis Singles Final

Five hundred optimistic tennis followers assembled at the Edgemoor Club courts yesterday hoping to see the Dooley Mitchell-Velverton Garnett final round match of the Grand National Tourney completed, but were deprived of the privilege by a sudden downpour that washed out the match midway in the second set.

The match will be continued and finished Saturday, July 3, on the Edgemoor Court.

The spectators, defying the heavily overcast sky, sat through a thrilling first set to watch strong, lithe Garnett take the first set from Mitchell, 8—6, after Mitchell had come from behind to take a 6—5 lead after trailing, 5—3.

Mitchell held a 3—2 lead in the second set, rallying after having dropped the first two games. He appeared to have found himself in this set scoring with beautiful drop shots, and in the third game he aced Garnett twice. Garnett, whose service was shakey throughout, double faulted twice in the second game, although winning it to take a 2—0 lead.

In the first set, Garnett opened with a confident attack on Mitchell's backhand, to jump into a 2—0 lead. But when Mitchell finally smoothed out his backhand to win the fifth game Garnett became cautious, choosing to move to the net to score placements.

Mitchell scored often on drop shots in the ninth, tenth and eleventh games after he had lost several points on Garnett's brilliant cross court returns of drop shots earlier in the set.

Mass Meeting For Self-Rule Draws Leaders

Civic Group Officials to Attend D. C. Protest Rally Tomorrow.

A dozen or more Washington civic leaders last night had accepted invitations to participate in a mass demonstration by Southeast Washington residents in behalf of the campaign for self-government, it was announced last night by William A. Maio, president of the Southeast Citizens Association, backers of the movement.

The demonstration is to take the form of a protest mass meeting to be held tomorrow night in the Fifth Precinct Police Station at Fifth and E streets southeast.

In May, Maio asked Congress to consider formation of a Washington City council composed of 13 elected members as the District legislative body. He expressed belief that if all the groups interested in local government would get behind this, or any other one plan, "we would stand a better chance of getting somewhere."

Bumper Wheat Crop Filling U.S. Elevators With $1 Grain

By the Associated Press.

Enid, Okla., June 27.—Combines are roaring in the Nation's "bread basket," as jubilant wheat farmers, the memory of five lean years forgotten, reap a money harvest equaled a few times in history.

Across the Southern plains happy harvest crews are laboring from daylight to dark on the biggest crop since 1926 an dthe richest since the World War.

So much grain is being gathered that the problem of transporting it to market has become acute. Every type of vehicle from ancient touring cars to huge trucks is in service.

On the Texas plains, dry-land wheat is making 39 bushels to the acre, while irrigated acreages are yielding up to 60 bushels an acre.

Fred Zimmerman, big Texas planter, declared:

"We may never see it this good again."

In Oklahoma crop experts predict the yield will be more than twicé as large as last year, when 27,520,000 bushels reached the market.

The Enid Terminal Market, one of the Ntaion's largest, has been clogged since the beginning of the harvest three weeks ago.

Prices at rural elevators have consistently remained higher than a dollar a bushel, compared with 74 cents at the beginning of last year's harvest. Much wheat is going into storage to wait for even higher offerings.

Responsible for these prices are America's small holdover, the drought in the Northwest and reports of rust damage in Canada and the Northern States, statisticians declare.

Separate Peace Moves Visioned In Dyers' Strike

Possible negotiation toward an agreement between strikers in the cleaning and dying industry of Washington and individual plant owners was expected to begin this morning, strike leaders said last night.

Although the committee representing the plant owners continued silent about their plans, Calvin Cousens, president of the striking union, was confident several employers were ready to move toward separate agreements.

A vote of support apd promise of financial aid to the union through the duration of the strike was given yesterday by a group of independent retail tailors. They also agreed to withhold work from plants on strike and those which the union charges with accepting work from striking plants.

Plans to approach the public assistance division of the District and demand relief for strikers were formulated in a meeting of strikers yesterday afternoon. Officers of the union registered the names of two plants with the women's bureau of the Labor Department for investigation as violators of the eight-hour day for women.

Announcement of the results of investigation in striking plants by the League of Women Shoppers, a consumers' organiaztion active in Washington for the last year, was to be made this morning.

Steel Output Is Maintained At High Rate

Operations Drop 1½ Point to 74 Per Cent but Backlog Holds.

Cleveland, Ohio, June 27.—In spite of some signs of a summer lull in steel buying, mills continue production at a high rate to meet needs of consumers and little progress is being made in reducing backlogs, says Steel.

As an offset to declining needs of automotive manufacturers, while new models are being prepared, projected needs in various other lines, largely heavy products, promise fairly early placing of substantial lots for late summer and fall delivery. With the large tonnages already on books, this promises to keep production relatively high past the usual summer lull.

As evidence of the extent of backlogs, sheet mills in the Pittsburgh district offer delivery on hot-rolled galvanized sheets in 22 weeks and on cold-rolled sheets in ten weeks. Bar bookings at present are about equal to shipments, with deliveries at two to eight weeks at Pittsburgh and 30 days at Chicago. Inland Steel Co. has orders on books for three months from the date of resuming production. Some irregularity in operations will be met for the next few weeks because of vacations, some plants closing down entirely for one or two weeks for this purpose.

Tin Plate Active.

Tin plate makers are being pressed to accept new business, but as most producers are sold for full capacity to September 30, little relief can be given. Pittsburgh tin mills are working as high as 18 turns per week to meet demand.

Largely due to closing of the Johnstown, Pa., plant of Bethlehem by order of the Governor of Pennsylvania last week the national operating rate is off 1½ points to 74 per cent of capacity. Idleness of the Johnstown mill caused the Pittsburgh rate to drop 10 points to 82 per cent. Other changes were of little effect. Youngstown dropped 1 point to 29 per cent. Buffalo 1 point to 88, and Cincinnati 7 points to 86. Cleveland made a gain of 3 points to 49 per cent, Detroit 2 points to 99, and New England 10 points to 92. No change was made at Chicago, 63½ per cent, Eastern Pennsylvania 67, Wheeling 93, Birmingham 83 and St. Louis 93 per cent.

Resumption of production at plants idle because of labor blockades is expected to bring the operating rate sharply back next week, protection to workers assuring rapid dispersal of pickets and the end of the strike.

Structural steel awards the past week were largest since the week of January 30, totaling 59,191 tons. The largest was 19,800 tons for the Mississippi River bridge at Baton Rouge, La. Other large awards included 6,800 tons for towers for the Bronx-Whitestone bridge at New York, 5,500 tons for a Queens courthouse, 5,000 tons of steel piling for a Mississippi River dam, 3,100 tons for a hospital in New York and 3,000 tons for a rayon plant in Ohio. A large tonnage is pending, some 24,000 tons being represented in six projects.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively, A Special Correspondent.

Strike Tension Lessens but War Threat Rises; Markets Discount Setback.

New York, June 27.—The financial week closed with considerable uneasiness over the prospect of war in Europe, but with a shade more optimism toward our own economic difficulties. The feeling gained ground that, after the early excesses in which State, and indirectly Federal, authority played a part, the C. I. O. labor organizers were drifting round a bit toward a greater sense of responsibility and more desire to conduct their affairs on a peaceable basis.

It may be too early to turn optimistic on the labor situation in this country, and the markets clearly have been discounting a setback in business because of the strikes and fears of strikes.

It is, nevertheless, not too much to hope that public opinion will rule in the end and that public opinion will insist on a fair settlement. The Administration itself probably will be the first to sense the drift of public feeling against wholesale disregard of property rights and individual liberty involved in the strikes.

An unusually good six months' earnings experience for American business is closing. Reports on corporation results will tend to support prices for the next few weeks, barring a heavy weight of adverse developments. Given enough industrial peace to remove anxiety lest a genuine business paralysis attack the country in the near future, and provided the fighting in Europe does not spread, the good crops now coming to market should form the basis for the traditional pickup in business this autumn.

Seasonal Recession.

Strikes are visibly affecting industry. This week's report indicated something more than seasonal recession. Railroad freight-car loadings for last week increased slightly over the previous week and held a fair gain over a year ago, but new orders in steel and some other industries are still falling, if only moderately. The steel industry's operating rate is hanging fire around 76 or 77 per cent of capacity, which measures the mills shut down since the 90 per cent rate of nearly a month ago was in effect. Retail buying is holding up, as men out of work have not yet had their spending power appreciably reduced.

With the passing of the income tax date the Government bond market has weakened a little in the face of a press of funds, partly of foreign origin, for short term employment. That demand brought down the yield rate on bankers bills, but other rates were unaffected. In fact, the Treasury weekly discount bill offering went at a slightly higher rate. The present reduced pace of business would seem to give a new lease of life on easy money, and particularly so since Federal Reserve policy is unlikely to be directly again in near future toward restraining mounting excess reserves.

Excess reserves last week climbed $60,000,000, after a setback in the previous week, largely on new Treasury spending. Another $50,000,000 also was added to the gold stock, which would be regarded as routine were it not for the ever-mounting public debt, which as the fiscal year ends is more than forty billions and already is creating an atmosphere of distrust in business because of the activity toward higher taxation.

War Threats.

A turn in French financial affairs may be near, with the defeat this week of the Blum government and the selection of M. Chautemps, a man of somewhat less radical shade, to form a new government. Some rapid changes may take place, but more than new names will be necessary to prevent financial collapse in France. The trouble there as here is an unbalanced budget and large spending for social purposes at a time when business still is struggling to recover; but the difference is that matters have gone so far on the other side that capital has lost virtually all confidence. Funds have been leaving for fear of confiscation. Reassurance on the political must go with any purely financial measures, however sound, to save the franc from a real debacle. Fortunately the French have a way of clawing back after reaching the brink.

France's financial difficulties are after all to be considered as a minor worry in a Europe beset afresh as it was this week with warlike demonstrations. The more belligerent attitude of Germany and Italy obviously gave fresh concern to the world's markets. War may be put off a while longer, but the lack of sense and the state of nervous ambitions which develop into the present position around Spain insure that all economic planning will not go far into the future.

Patriotic Fete To Be Climaxed By Fireworks

Senator Duffy to Speak at Main Celebration Next Monday.

Fireworks over the Potomac will climax a city-wide program of sports events and community celebration when Washington observes the Nation's birthday next Monday, July 5.

The biggest party of the day will start at 7:15 in the evening at the Water Gate, where Senator F. Ryan Duffey, of Wisconsin, and others will speak and the United States Marine Band will give a concert of patriotic music, conducted by Capt. Taylor Branson.

Elaborate plans have been announced by Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, general chairman of the program. He will preside at the main event and introduce Senator Duffey, Representative James P. McGranery, of Pennsylvania, who will read the Declaration of Independence, and the Rev. H. W. Burgan of the Hamline Methodist Episcopal Church, who will deliver the invocation.

Fireworks Display.

Military, patriotic and veterans' organizations have arranged to take part in the procession of flags, led by the color guard of the United States Army, the Navy, Marine Corps, Coast Guard and District National Guard. They will carry the flag of the United States and their own flags under the direction of Col. John W. Oehamn, assisted by Col. Peyton G. Nevitt and other officers of the District National Guard.

Thirteen Boy Scouts, representing the 13 original States, will be stationed in semicircle behind the speakers' stand during the exercises. The flag raising ceremony will open the program, and its lowering will mark the completion of the formal celebration, followed by a display of sky rockets and other fireworks set off from either Columbia or Roosevelt Island in the Potomac River.

Marathon Race.

Many gold, silver and bronze medals will be given to the competitors in athletic events planned as part of the general program of community celebration.

Sixty or more entrants in the annual marathon, sponsored by the Takoma Park Community Center, are scheduled to start from Alexandria at 1 p. m. and finish in Takoma Park about the hour of the celebration there.

Other programs of speeches and fireworks are schedhled for Pafisades Park, Taft Recreation Center, Wesley Heights Community, American University Park, Bennecker Recreation Center, Barry Farms Playgrounds and the National Training School for Boys.

British Marines Sent To Strike-Torn Island

Port-of-Spain, Trinidad, June 27 (AP).—The warship Essex rushed to Tobago today as riotous strikes which have swept Trinidad the past week threatened a new instance of violence at the Island of Ward. Two platoons of marines were aboard the Essex. All laborers on Ward Island were expected to strike tomorrow. Marines were deemed necessary to assure order.

Quiet prevailed here today, after a week of violence which cost 14 lives. Oil workers, busmen and other laborers are on strike for a 40-hour week and increased wages.

New York, June 27 (AP).—Another thrilling sea rescue was written into maritime records today as the steamship President Pierce resumed its course for New York after saving the 40 crew members of the fire-swept British freighter Sandgate Castle.

Forced from their ship approximately 650 miles southeast of New York, the sailors tossed about in lifeboats for more than eight hours until the rescue ship reached them.

Their ship was a fire-blackened derelict when the President Pierce arrived in response to a radio appeal.

Announces Over Year in Advance; Assails Nice Regime.

Jackson without a further struggle, at least behind the scenes.

It is generally taken for granted in Baltimore, which contains more than one-half of the population and almost two-thirds of the registered voters of the State, that, barring a serious internal fight among the Democrats, one of that party next year will recapture the Governorship. Baltimore and Maryland in local matters traditionally support the Democratic Party and a Republican State-wide victory is rare.

Gov. Harry W. Nice, the Republican incumbent whose administration Mayor Jackson sharply attacked in his statement today, is only the third Republican to occupy the Maryland gubernatorial chair since the Civil War. Even now the State Legislature is overwhelmingly Democratic and so are all other State elective officials. Gov. Nice, it is understood, does not desire to succeed himself and there is divided opinion in Republican ranks as to who should be nominated next year.

These factors point to the Democratic candidate for Governor winning—unless the party becomes embroiled in internal warfare. There is a possibility that the Washington Administration may interfere in the Democratic politics of Maryland—not especially in the matter of the governorship—and this may prove an unsettling factor.

Anti-Tydings Move Possible.

From time to time there have been reports that the Roosevelt political strategists may undertake to prevent Senator Millard E. Tydings' return to the Senate next year from Maryland. Senator Tydings has been critical of the New Deal for the last four years. Frequently he has voted against measures sponsored by the President. He is now among the opponents of the Supreme Court reorganization bill.

It has been rumored about from time to time that the Roosevelt Administration might undertake to run Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles against Senator Tydings. Welles is a Marylander by virtue of the fact that he owns a country home at Oxon Hill in Prince Georges County. He is not widely known in the State but played a prominent part in the 1936 Presidential campaign.

In recent weeks it also has been reported that Welles may be satisfied with his new post of Undersecretary of State and that the Administration might back Representative T. Alan Goldsborough of the First or Eastern Shore Congressional District against Tydings.

At all events, Representative Goldsborough has been sounding out his Democratic colleagues in the House and Democratic leaders around the State regarding his senatorial prospects.

New Dealer Hardly Issue.

Jackson cannot be classified either as a New Dealer or an anti-New Dealer. He has never indicated any enthusiasm for the New Deal, but, at the same time, he has not criticized it. He is on friendly relations with Postmaster General James A. Farley and has had pleasant relations on matters affecting Baltimore with other Roosevelt officials. It is difficult to see how the New Deal might be made any issue in the Maryland Democratic gubernatorial fight—except through an alliance with an aspirant, such as Senator Tydings, for the senatorial nomination.

In the behind-the-scenes skirmishing, which has gone on since the death of Ritchie 16 months ago, Mayor Jackson's chief opponent for the gubernatorial nomination has been Herbert R. O'Conor, the 40-year-old Democratic attorney general of the State. O'Conor as a candidate several times for State's attorney for Baltimore and for attorney general has been the best vote-getter the local Democrats ever had. If anyone challenges Jackson's right to the Democratic nomination it most probably will be O'Conor.

The difficulty facing the youthful attorney general, however, is the lack of a party organization. Jackson is dominant in his control of the Democratic organization in a large part of Baltimore, and in view of past contests, appears unbeatable at this time in the city. In recent years he has made alliances with various Democratic leaders in the counties—and in recent months he has come to an understanding with several of the major leaders in the old Ritchie faction.

Sasscer in Line.

O'Conor is supported in Baltimore by William Curran, a bitter political foe of Jackson. A few years ago this support would have been worth much more than it is today. Curran lost prestige when he was unable to stop Jackson's renomination for Mayor in 1935, after a spirited primary fight, and again when Representative Vincent L. Palmisano, now chairman of the House District Committee, was renominated last year. Jackson supported Palmisano. Curran backed his opponent. More recently adherents of the Jackson wing of the party have been victorious in other intraparty fights.

State Senator Lansdale G. Sasscer, of Prince Georges County, well known among lawyers in Washington, also has been counted as an aspirant for the gubernatorial nomination. He is president of the State Senate, and as such would succeed to the governorship in the event of a vacancy. His friends contend that he has a right to be considered for the party's gubernatorial nomination next year. But he has not been striving very hard for the honor as far as surface indications go and it is doubtful whether he would engage in a primary fight.

Of course, if anything happened to Gov. Nice—now in a local hospital recovering from an operation for the removal of an eye—and Senator Sasscer actually became Governor of the State for the remainder of the present term, Senator Sasscer hardly would permit Jackson to oust him without a struggle.

Another Democratic aspirant for the governorship listed here is Howard Bruce, the State's Democratic National Committeeman and president of the Baltimore National Bank. Bruce's name has figured in talk of a Ritchie succesor ever since 1930. He is willing to carry the party's standard—but, again, it is doubtful whether he would engage in a primary fight.

Scouts Prepare to Hit Real Washington Hay

11,000 Scouts Pour Into City For Jamboree

Trains and Buses Bring Khaki-Clad Youths From All Parts of U. S.

Scouts will take turns giving demonstrations of Scout work in the arena.

The 5,000 Scouts to arrive yesterday formed the second contingent to take up quarters for the Jamboree, and executives last night said the camp was operating at about half of capacity.

Officials expect the camp will have 25,000 boys when the program gets under way Wednesday.

The hub of the Jamboree grounds became established yesterday just below the Washington Monument—on the level area that leads to the reflecting pool. There, in addition to the administrative offices were set up telephone and telegraph offices, a postoffice, publicity headquarters, and one large tent, filled with typewriters and mimeograph machines, designated as the Jamboree Journal.

Letters Back Home.

The postoffice became a popular spot yesterday afternoon as the boys, their work done, took time to write notes back home.

While the Monument Grounds became the heart of the Jamboree, the entire 350-acre camp site, extending south to Hains Point, with hundreds of tents sprawled over a long stretch of river bank on the west side of the Potomac, was bustling with activity.

From the top of the monument the scene took on the appearance of a State fair, with the administrative section resembling a circus grounds.

The comparison was not lost by closer inspection, for exhibits and museum displays are forming an important feature of this Jamboree.

The exhibit places are really trading posts. In them Scouts from Maine may look upon horned toads from Texas, and, if they wish, trade sea shells or pine cones for them. Trinkets from every section of the country were brought out of knapsacks and put on display. There was cotton from Southern States, and glass from New York. A troop from Colorado Springs is bringing gold ore from famous Cripple Creek.

Travelers' Section.

One section—the one adjoining the administration grounds—was being occupied yesterday by Scouts for whom this Jamboree is only the first leg of a summer's journey. It is known as the World Jamboree section, and scouts camped there are headed for the international event to take place in August in Holland. The section is being inhabited mostly by foreign scouts, but into a large lot moved boys from Richmond, Va. They set up a dozen pup tents, over which were drawn large, colorful paintings, done by the scouts themselves, depicting highlights in the history of their State.

Five thousand more scouts are expected today. Nearly 17,000 will answer the mess call tonight.

Among those scheduled to arrive during the day are 161 scouts from Westchester County, N. Y.; 40 scouts from Reading, Pa.; 268 from Texas; 100 from Wilmington, Del.; 125 from Pottsville and Hazleton, Pa.; 186 from Michigan; 212 from Cleveland; 34 from Martinsburg, W. Va.; 350 from up-State New York.

Post's Scout Jamboree Reporter Lists Details of Huge Gathering

By Jack Parker—Troop 5.
Post Special Jamboree Reporter.

This afternoon I had a short interview with Harvey Gordon, who is well known to every scout of this country. He is chief engineer of the Boy Scouts of America. At present he is also director of engineering and physical arrangements for the National Jamboree.

The Jamboree camp site covers 350 acres of ground. There are between 4,000 and 5,000 tents in service. Of these 110 are big tops, including business headquarters, hospitals, kitchens and mess halls. There are 20 hospitals, each assigned to care for 1,200 boys. Sixty-five doctors handle the medical needs of the camp. There are two fire companies and 21 section kitchens cooking for 680 troop mess halls.

When a scout enters the Jamboree, he is assigned to a troop, which has three leaders and 33 scouts. Forty troops make a section of about 1,300 boys.

The location of the scout's home determines the region in the camp he is assigned to. Our Washington Scouts are in sections "R" and "S" to the section east of the Lincoln Memorial. This is the third region. The region with the smallest number of boys so far is one with one boy who is from the Philippine Islands.

Although the Jamboree is not to get under way until Wednesday, there are 10,000 fellows registered and quartered at the camps already.

The largest group to arrive together from one city includes 418 Scouts from New York.

Homing Pigeon Off for Texas From Jamboree

Bimbo Due in Houston Tomorrow, Scout Estimates.

The scene of the National Boy Scout Jamboree in Washington yesterday was one of arrivals.

It was also the place for a departure.

Just before noon Norman Speck, of a Houston, Tex., troop, bade his homing pigeon "Bimbo" farewell, and released him into the air.

Bimbo winged his way into the cloudy sky, circled twice, and headed southwest—with a message telling of Norman's safe arrival in the Capital.

"He ought to reach home Tuesday morning," said Norman.

But he was a bit worried, because Bimbo has never started out on so long a journey before. His longest trip up to yesterday had been 200 miles.

"But I'm sure he'll get to Houston and tell my folks I got to Washington all right."

New Zealanders Here.

After a long trip by boat and bus, Eric Saunders and F. J. Burborough, of New Zealand, arrived in Washington, and started pitching their two-bunk tent in the shadow of the Washington Monument.

"I spell my name with an 'aiy'," said Saunders. "No, you don't dot the letter, it's 'aiy'—'aiy', 'aiy', don't you understand—'aiy' as in 'apple'."

The troop from Richmond didn't have far to go to this Jamboree. But it's only the beginning of a long trip. The boys are sailing from New York July 21 for the Jamboree in Holland. Then they'll visit several countries in Europe.

The New Zealand boys are headed for Holland, too.

Radford Raley, of Lubbock, Tex., was in trouble last night—he was the first Jamboree patient.

Taken to the Naval Hospital, he underwent an operation for appendicitis. Physicians last night said his condition was "excellent."

Swapping Starts.

The Boy Scout practice of "swapping" was in full progress last night. Boys were showing off wares from their home States, which they brought to exchange for articles from some other section of the country.

Nazis Prepare To Drop Church Aid in Bavaria

All Financial Help Will Be Withdrawn Within Three Years.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, June 27.—The Nazi ragime announced today that within three years the Bavarian state will withdraw all voluntary financial contributions to the church, Protestant and Catholic alike.

"The churches have only themselves to blame if the state no longer contributes to their upkeep," declared Adolf Wagner, Bavarian Minister of the Interior, who made the announcement at the little Bavarian town of Fuerstenfeldbruck.

"They have had four years to fall into stride with the rest of us."

Nazi authorities said the Bavarian contributions totalled 140,000,000 marks ($56,000,000) during the four years of Nazi power. They will be cut by 5,000,000 marks from time to time until in 1940 they cease altogether, Wagner said.

The minister drew applause from his Nazi audience when he told of high salaries received by church leaders in Germany. He asserted Michael Cardinal Faulhaber received 29,000 marks ($11,600) a year.

Wagner said that Bavaria will continue to collect church taxes for Protestants and Catholics, which in 1936 amounted to 26,000,000 marks ($10,400,000). Also, he said, certain payments the state is obligated to make under treaties such as the concordate with the Vatican would continue as before.

12 Ordered to Trial.

Berlin, June 27 (U.P.).—The Nazi government, striking out again at its Roman Catholic and Protestant church foes, tonight ordered 12 confessional pastors to stand trial on charges of "Incitement to disobedience." They will be arrainged Wednesday in Berlin's summary court.

Arraignment of the pastors, who are followers of the Rev. Martin Niemoeller in opposing nazification of the Protestant church, resulted from their defiance of the Reich church ministry, headed by Hans Kerrl.

It will be the first time that confessional pastors have been brought to trial, although nearly 50 of them are under arrest.

Accidental Pistol Shot Fatal to Colored Boy

James Gray, 15-year-old colored boy, of 407 Hobart place northwest, died last night at Freedmen's Hospital as the result of an accidental shooting late Saturday evening. Garland Perry, 17, who fired the shot, was held for action by the coroner's jury at the Tenth Precinct police station.

The two boys had been playing together with a .32-caliber automatic, in the bedroom of Perry's home, 2914 Eleventh street northwest. Gray told police before he died that the shooting was accidental.
